FOREWORD

We are very pleased to present this edition of Part II of the Official Catholic Directory. An updated list of the Archdioceses and Dioceses of the World reflecting the name of the Ordinary of the See, address, telephone and fax numbers is again included. Permission to reprint information from the 1996 Annuario Pontificio has been secured and we wish to graciously thank the Vatican Secretariat of State, the Vatican Press and Archbishop Cacciavillan, Apostolic Pro-Nuncio to the United States for their invaluable assistance.

The Pilgrimage Destination section has expanded in this issue and highlights additional places of special interest. As we approach the new millennium, pilgrimages are being encouraged and this effort is presented to you not only as a reader but as a traveler. This section offers significant information relative to the areas as well as the importance of the location. Part II also contains new, additional and current data not found in the main volume of the Directory.

We also wish to thank the ecclesiastical authorities and all those involved for their cooperation and responsiveness. We always welcome suggestions for improvements to the Official Catholic Directory and Part II. Our goal is to continuously strive toward perfection and excellence.

THE 1996 CATHOLIC INTERNET DIRECTORY

This Catholic Networking Directory was created as an aid to inter-diocesan and general Church communications. The information included in the Directory was not collected by the Official Catholic Directory, nor has the Official Catholic Directory verified the accuracy of this information. Inclusion in the Internet Section of the Official Catholic Directory in no way implies endorsement of particular organizations by the Official Catholic Directory, published by P.J. Kenedy & Sons in association with R.R. Bowker, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc. INCLUSION IN THE INTERNET SECTION OF THE OFFICIAL CATHOLIC DIRECTORY DOES NOT ESTABLISH COVERAGE UNDER THE GROUP TAX EXEMPTION RULING ISSUED TO THE UNITED STATES CATHOLIC CONFERENCE (USCC). In order to allow for efficient communications between all parties, please send no general messages to parties listed in this Directory.

"With the advent of computer telecommunications and what are known as computer participation systems, the Church is offered further means for fulfilling her mission. Methods of facilitating communication and dialogue among her own members can strengthen the bonds of unity between them. Immediate access to information makes it possible for her to deepen her dialogue with the contemporary world."

SECTION 1:

ARCHDIOCESAN E-MAIL ADDRESS NUMBERS

The following information has been submitted specifically by the various diocesan offices, parishes, schools, and other ministries.

CATHOLIC DIOCESES WITH WEB PAGES:

The following is an abbreviated listing of U.S. dioceses with World Wide Web pages on the Internet. Some carry the designation "unofficial" which means that Diocesan directories and official information is posted, but that the page is not sponsored by the diocese. At the time this directory was compiled, 17 additional dioceses were planning Web pages, all of which should be operational by Summer of 1996. World Wide Web pages listed here typically include links to diocesan personnel, a directory of parishes, Mass schedules, as well as excerpts from the local Catholic newspapers. To obtain updates to the list of diocesan web sites, visit the Catholic resources site at:

SECTION 8: CATHOLIC INTERNET MAILING LISTS

Electronic mailing lists are automatic computer programs that send a letter or other communication to thousands of E-mail addresses at one time. These are most often used to send free newsletters, known as "Mailing Lists". One of the nicest features of these lists is that most allow you to submit your own material to be sent out to the list as a whole, usually with approval of the maintainer of the list.

To add your name to any of the lists below, you need to send an E-mail message to the computer that sends out the list. You will give it a command to add your E-mail address to the list. Your message will look like this:

SUBSCRIBE Name-of-List Your-Full-Name

For example, to subscribe to the Worldwide Marriage Encounter List, you would E-mail this message:

SUBSCRIBE WME-L Your-Full-Name To this address: listserv@american.edu

If you wish to stop receiving messages from a particular list, simply send the following message to the same E-mail address:

UNSUBSCRIBE Name-of-List Your-Full-Name

For More Advanced Users: The U.S. Christian/Catholic Bulletin Board Networks

A Bulletin Board System (BBS) is a small online computer network which enables users to chat with each other, leave E-mail, and exchange files. There are approximately 60,000 individual BBSs active in the United States. Some BBSs have only a hundred or so members. Others count hundreds of thousands of members. The largest, a bulletin board in Wisconsin named "EXEC PC", counts close to a million members!

The level of networking does not end here. Many of these BBSs have further organized themselves into super-networks which may contain anywhere from a dozen to several thousand individual BBSs. To join one of these networks (most are free), call the network data line and download (copy to your computer) a short file of instructions for joining the network. The System Operator, known as a "Sysop", is the person responsible for supervising a BBS or even an entire network of BBSs. The Catholic Information network is one such network.

THE CATHOLIC INFORMATION NETWORK:

The Catholic Information Network (CIN) is a Bulletin Board System (BBS) Network developed by Sharon and Mike Mollerus in San Diego, CA, and "echoed" (the messages are copied and posted) by several hundred BBSs worldwide. Thirty of these BBS's are officially registered as nodes (extensions) of the CIN, which means that these local BBSs serve as a local "gateway" for entering the Catholic Information Network. By calling one of these local numbers, you may tap into the majority of CIN files and conference areas, where important church issues are discussed.

Note: The CIN is wholly distinct from the Catholic Resource Network (CRNET). The CIN Host (Registered) Nodes are listed below. To dial the listed phone numbers from outside the United States, use the International Dialing Code plus the US country prefix, which is 1. Many of these BBSs offer their own distinct files and services as well as echoing the CIN.

priests for life

Did you ever realize that the same words which Our Lord spoke to save the world are used by those who promote abortion?

THIS IS MY BODY

The same words, "This is My Body," are spoken from opposite ends of the universe! Christ uses them for salvation; "pro-choicers" use them for destruction.

Abortion supporters cry out, "This is my body...so I will control it, even if it means the child must die!"

The Lord Jesus says, "This is My Body, given up for you, so you may have life!" He gives His Body away in love. Love says, "I sacrifice myself for the good of the other person." Abortion says, "I sacrifice the other person for the good of myself." Abortion is the opposite of love.

Abortion supporters know they have a body, but they have forgotten why. They know they have choice and freedom and life, but they have forgotten why. Our Lord reminds us and them. We have our lives, our freedom, our choices, our bodies so that we can freely choose to give ourselves away in love.

We belong to God. While some cry out, "This is my body, my choice, my life!", Christians cry out with St. Paul, "None of us lives as his own master and none of us dies as his own master" (Rom 14:7). "You are not your own" (1 Cor. 6:19).

More than ever, the world needs this lesson. The tragedy of abortion is one of the highest prices we pay for forgetting the meaning of love.

We at Priests for Life thank God for you, because you are showing the world how to love and how to find the meaning of life! Continue to do so with confidence!

We want to join hands with you in this great pro-life effort. We want you to join hands with us. Throughout the United States and throughout the world, Priests for Life is training and inspiring clergy and laity alike.

If you want to see the clergy speak up with a more powerful and united voice, join Priests for Life! We ask you to spread word about us among your religious communities, and invite them to join as well, whether or not they are ordained clergy.

Fr. Frank Pavone, National Director of Priests for Life, will be glad to come to your city for retreats, seminars and presentations. You can listen to his radio shows worldwide on WEWN (call: 205-672-7200) and order from our large catalog of brochures, audio and video tapes (call: 914-937-8243).

"In the capacity of National Director, I know Fr. Pavone has traveled the length and breadth of our country encouraging Catholic Priests to actively participate in the pro-life movement. I know of no effort more noble, more timely or important than the recruitment of our clergy in the cause for life."

John Cardinal O'Connor, Archbishop of New York

"I hope that many Priests and deacons will join Priests for Life. This association needs many members to educate and encourage all the priests and deacons who must all work together to stop the terrible war against unborn children."

Mother Teresa on 1/24/95

Priests for Life Offers Training Seminars for Clergy and Laity

"Your seminars were extra-ordinarily well received. Many of our priests and deacons expressed to me that they thought your presentations were among the most practical and theologically sound we have heard on the subject of protection of the unborn children..."

Most Rev. Rene H. Gracida, Bishop of Corpus Christi

"After 25 years of involvement in the battle for the sanctity of life, I feel confident saying that the seminar that features Fr. Frank Pavone is among the most helpful and informative. Fr. Pavone's message crosses denominational, social and political lines."

A new wireless microphone made especially for churches...

...the end of clicks, pops, dropouts and noise.

More Lectrosonics wireless microphone systems are used in the broadcast and motion picture industries than any other brand. Now this proven quality and ruggedness is available in a special new design to meet the unique needs of churches.

A very disruptive problem occurs in churches with conventional wireless receivers when the transmitter is off, such as before and after the service. If an interfering signal enters an idle receiver, you will hear a burst of noise from the sound system. This problem is completely eliminated with an all new digital code squelch system. The digital code also eliminates annoying clicks and pops as you turn the transmitter on and off.

The very high sensitivity of the receiver and full power transmitter output suppress dropouts and noise during operation. The high quality audio performance is well suited to even the most advanced sound systems.

Battery life is 14 hours, or more. An LED on the belt pack transmitter keeps you constantly informed of the battery status, with plenty of advance notice when the battery runs low. All aluminum construction provides a system as rugged as it is reliable. Designed and manufactured with pride in the USA.

All this, at a surprisingly low price.

INTRODUCTION

Pilgrimages—journeys to sacred places for religious motives—are as old as civilization. Since the earliest times, such journeys have been made as acts of devotion, penance, or thanksgiving or in search of blessings or miracles.

The concept crosses all ideological boundaries. In the ancient Near East, a portion of the harvest was carried to shrines to be offered to the gods in gratitude and homage. Muslim law prescribes a pilgrimage to Mecca, the birthplace of Muhammad, for all who are able to undertake the journey. For Hindus, a pilgrimage to Varanasi (Benares), to bathe in the sacred waters of the Ganges, is considered an obligation.

Christian pilgrims, from early in the second century, traveled great distances to venerate places in the Holy Land sanctified by the presence of Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, or the Apostles. The number of pilgrims increased greatly in the fourth century, after Emperor Constantine I converted to Christianity and legalized the faith throughout the Roman Empire. He and his mother, Helena, were themselves the most influential of pilgrims. The historian Eusebius of Caesarea attributed to Constantine the discovery of Christ's tomb, the Holy Sepulcher; other accounts credit his mother with finding the True Cross.

Word of the discoveries spread, spurring the pilgrimage movement. Although travel was always difficult and often perilous, by the end of the fourth century pilgrimages to the Holy Land were relatively common.

Rome, as it became the center of the Christian faith, became a frequent pilgrimage destination, as did Greece and Egypt, where the faithful could follow the footsteps of the Apostles.

By the Middle Ages, pilgrimages had become a significant part of Christian devotional life, whether they involved a journey between neighboring cities or across half the civilized world. Churches and cathedrals throughout Europe holding relics of the Holy Family, the Apostles, and other early saints drew throngs of the faithful, from common people and parish priests to emperors and popes.

The role of such relics—particularly those that were instruments of Christ's Passion—is strong in pilgrimage, and many have survived to our time. Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris, for example, enshrines part of the Crown of Thorns, wood from the Cross, and a nail from the Crucifixion. Kept in individual reliquaries encased in a gilded ark, they are on view only during Lent. The Sancta Sanctorum Chapel in Rome has relics of the Cross, Christ's sandals, and a portrait of Christ "not painted by mortal hands." At Aachen, Germany, relics include the infant Jesus' swaddling clothes and the Virgin's veil. The Shroud of Turin, believed by many to be Christ's burial cloth, is world famous despite continuing questions about its origin.

Corporeal relics—the bodies of saints, or parts of them—have also formed the basis of many famous shrines. Prominent among such places is Santiago de Compostela in northern Spain, revered since the early ninth century as the burial place of the remains of Saint

James the Apostle, who was beheaded by King Herod in Judea in A.D. 44 and whose body was thrown to dogs.

The heads, hearts, and various limbs of other saints were sometimes removed—not by their enemies, but after death by their adherents—and enshrined separately. In Paris, the heart of Saint Catherine Labouré is kept in a crystal reliquary. In Goa, India, millions were drawn a few years ago to a week-long exposition of one of Saint Francis Xavier's arms. Counted among shrines marking the tombs of saints are those of Saint Martin in Tours, France (once the most frequented shrine in Europe), and that of his mentor, Saint Hilary, in nearby Poitiers, both dating from the fourth century. There are scores of others, on every continent.

Holy objects other than relics have given rise to many other popular shrines. At Częstochowa, Poland, the icon Our Lady of Częstochowa, also known as the Black Madonna, is believed to possess miraculous powers and has been venerated since the fourteenth century. At the shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico City, millions come to see the peasant's cape on which the Blessed Virgin's image miraculously appeared following an apparition in 1531. In Brazil, an image of the Virgin was discovered on a rock by a small child and has led to a wide cult following. In Ancona, Italy, a weeping statue of the Virgin has drawn pilgrims since the early nineteenth century.

Numerous places have become the destinations of pilgrims because of apparitions of the Blessed Virgin, particularly in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Famed among them are Lourdes and La Salette in France and Fátima in Portugal; at all three, the Virgin appeared to young children and urged mankind's repentance and prayer. Pilgrims now number in the millions, and devotion has resulted in numberless reported favors and cures. Lourdes is today the most popular shrine of the Roman Catholic world, surpassing both Jerusalem and Rome.

Church authorities are cautious about giving credence to accounts of apparitions of Mary and approving of devotion at the places where they occur. Since the early nineteenth century, about 200 reports of such apparitions have been investigated, and only about 1 in 40 has received canonical sanction. In addition to Lourdes, La Salette, and Fátima, sanctioned apparitions since 1842 have occurred at the church of Saint Andrea della Frate in Rome and at Illaca in Croatia, Philippsdorf in Germany, Pontmain in France, Knock in Ireland, and Beauraing and Banneux in Belgium.

No country in Europe is without its Christian shrines. In England, a number of shrines that were widely known long before the Reformation of the early sixteenth century are the object of growing devotion today. Chief among them are Walsingham, Glastonbury, and Canterbury. (Chaucer's pilgrims of The Canterbury Tales were on their way to the shrine there of the martyred Saint Thomas Becket.)

Other shrines honor the founders of religious orders. Three of these, all in Italy, are the shrines of Saint Benedict at Monte Cassino, Saint Dominic in Bologna, and Saint Francis at Assisi.

New places of pilgrimage continue to arise. At Akita, Japan, an apparition of the Virgin in 1973 was declared "worthy of belief" by the Vatican, and the resulting shrine is attracting increasing numbers of the faithful.

Pilgrimage typically begins even before such apparitions are recognized by the Catholic Church. Such is the case with the small village of Medjugorje in Bosnia, where millions of people visit the site of apparitions of the Virgin that have occurred since 1981, although there has been no ruling from the Vatican on their validity.

The simple "desire to honor Catholic beliefs or devotions" gives rise to still another class of shrines, such as the Basilica of Sacré-Coeur on the summit of Montmartre in Paris, built by national subscription as a manifestation of contrition and hope after the Franco-Prussian War.

Canada and Latin America have numerous Christian shrines, and more than 100 are listed within the United States, chief among them the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C. Some were created in thanks for prayers answered or to remind the faithful of the messages received at Fátima and Lourdes; others mirror shrines in the Old World, such as Częstochowa, or mark scenes of martyrdom of early missionaries to the New World, such as the Shrine of the North American Martyrs near Albany, N.Y.

The popularity of Christian pilgrimage has waxed and waned, but it has lived on despite such cataclysmic events as the Reformation and the French Revolution and despite the skepticism of modern times.

The reasons for an individual pilgrimage are varied, but the results are often the same. Chateaubriand wrote: "There never was a pilgrim who did not come back to his village with one less prejudice and one more idea." Many, it is said, return stronger in body and at peace with God.

THE HOLY LAND

Christian pilgrims have journeyed great distances to the Holy Land since at least the second century to visit the sites of the founding of their faith.

All the major events in the life of Jesus Christ—the Annunciation, the Nativity, his ministry, and the Passion, Crucifixion, and Resurrection—took place in what today is Israel, a country only about the size of New Jersey. The sites of those events have been revered, preserved, desecrated, destroyed, rebuilt, and in some cases lost and relocated over the following centuries as sovereignty over the Holy Land has repeatedly changed.

There is scholarly disagreement about whether some of the sites are correctly identified; alternate locations that seem to fit with scriptural accounts have been suggested for some of them, notably the Holy Sepulcher. Two conditions must be fulfilled for any of the holy places to be considered authentic: The location must not contradict the data of the Bible, and the tradition connected with the site must go back to Apostolic times. This is the case with all the sites of the Holy Land, including those over which there is some question.

Although Christian pilgrimage to the Holy Land began in the second century, it was in the fourth century, when Emperor Constantine I legalized Christianity throughout the Roman Empire, that the number of pilgrims increased substantially. Encouraged by the emperor and by such influential scholars as Jerome (an early Bishop of Bethlehem, who translated the Bible into Latin), Christian pilgrims of Gentile origin flocked to Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Nazareth, and other places sanctified by the presence of the Holy Family and the Apostles.

Jerusalem's religious significance, of course, precedes the Christian era by more than 1,000 years. The city is sacred to people of three faiths—Christianity, Judaism, and Islam—and therefore to a third of the world's population. Here, in the ancient City of David, Solomon the Wise built the Temple to the Lord about 950 B.C.; near the site of that temple is the Western Wall or Wailing Wall, sacred to Judaism. Here, too, are the Dome of the Rock and the al-Aksa Mosque, which according to Muslim tradition are at the place at which Muhammad had his vision of heaven and received from God the commandments for the faithful.

For Christians, the same part of Jerusalem is the scene of the Passion, the Crucifixion, and the Resurrection. The Way of the Cross, or Via Dolorosa, in the Old City is believed to be the path Christ walked carrying the cross from the place of his trial to the place of his execution and entombment. The route passes the 14 Stations of the Cross, and countless pilgrims follow it, many of them with a procession by Franciscans each Friday at three o'clock. The last five stations are within the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. Commissioned in 326 by Constantine, the church has been rebuilt and modified time after time. Since the Crusades (1099–1260), it has enclosed the traditional locations of both Christ's crucifixion and burial.

Numerous Christian denominations have a presence in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher: the Greek Orthodox and Roman Catholics are prominent, followed by Armenians and Copts, who have their sections, and Ethiopians and Syrians, who have access rights.

Nearby, but outside the walls of the Old City, is Mount Zion, the place long recognized as the tomb of King David. It is also the location of the Cenacle, the "upper room" in which the Last Supper—a seder meal that evolved into the Christian Eucharist—took place.

The Mount of Olives offers a broad view of the Old City, and at its foot is the Garden of Gethsemane, where Christ prayed and sorrowed and where he was arrested by Roman soldiers on the last night of his life. On the crest of the Mount of Olives is the Chapel of the Ascension, traditionally believed to be the place at which Christ ascended into heaven.

Bethlehem, Jesus' birthplace, is only a few miles from Jerusalem. The original Church of the Nativity was built in the fourth century to enshrine the site, but—like the Church of the Holy Sepulcher—it has been rebuilt and extensively repaired many times. Under an old arrangement, it is shared by Roman Catholics (represented by the Franciscans), Greek Orthodox, and Armenian Orthodox. And as is true at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, the relationship has not always been happy; a disagreement between the Franciscans and the Greek Orthodox was a factor leading to the outbreak of the Crimean War (1854–1856). There are still occasional heated disagreements over who is in charge of what; sometimes the participants have come to blows, to the surprise of pilgrims expecting a scene of peace and tranquillity.

The Church of the Nativity is built over the cave where Jesus was born. In a grotto beneath the main altar, a silver star marks the traditional place of the actual birth, and nearby is the Chapel of the Manger, where Mary placed her newborn child.

The principal Roman Catholic church in Bethlehem, Saint Catherine's, is linked to the Church of the Nativity by a connecting door.

Manger Square, just outside, is the scene of colorful Christmas Eve celebrations held on various dates. Christmas for the Greek Orthodox is January 7; for the Armenians, it is January 19. On December 24, the festivities continue long into the evening, and the mass is shown on an enormous outdoor television screen for those unable to get inside the church. It is also broadcast around the world via satellite.

Nazareth—the scene of the Annunciation, when the angel Gabriel appeared to Mary and told her she would bear the Christ-child—was a small village in Christ's time and is now an Arab city of about 50,000. About half its inhabitants are Muslim, half Christian; it is consequently quiet on Fridays and Sundays, the sabbaths of the two faiths, but exceptionally busy on Saturdays.

The cave dwelling where the Annunciation is believed to have taken place has been revered for at least 1,600 years. A Byzantine church built on the site in the fifth century was rebuilt by the Crusaders in the twelfth century, then destroyed in the thirteenth century by the Mamluks. A Franciscan church was built in the early eighteenth century and was razed in 1954 to be replaced by the huge church now on the site, dedicated in 1969 and containing some of the remains of the earliest structures.

Nearby is the Church of Saint Joseph, said to be on the site of Joseph the Carpenter's workshop. The Church of Saint Gabriel marks the source of the spring at which some traditions say the Annunciation took place.

On the road toward Tiberias from Nazareth is the Arab village of Kafr Kana, the biblical Cana, where Jesus performed his first miracle, turning water into wine at a wedding and thus beginning his public ministry.

The route from Nazareth to Megiddo passes Mount Tabor, the traditional site of the Transfiguration (although some scholars favor Mount Hermon), where the disciples Peter, James, and John saw Christ "transfigured" ("his face shone like the sun and his garments became as white as light") and saw him in conversation with Moses and Elijah.

Transport

Getting to the Holy Land by air from the United States can be easily arranged from all major airports. A non-stop flight takes from 9 to 11 hours. Numerous tour operators offer Holy Land pilgrimage packages of various durations.

Within Israel, air service is available between major centers, and regular rail service links Jerusalem, Haifa, and Tel Aviv. The best way to travel between or outside major towns is by road, either in a rented vehicle (care is advised; Israeli drivers are notoriously reckless) or by bus, limousine, or minibus. In town, taxis are plentiful.

Accommodation

There is the widest possible selection of hotel accommodation in Israel, from modest guest houses to luxury hotels. Most major American chains are represented. There are also numerous holiday villages, Christian hospices, youth hostels, campsites, and kibbutz guest houses.

Similarly, restaurants run the gamut from snack stands in the streets to elegant restaurants. Fast food is plentiful and ranges from pizza to falafel.

ROME

In A.D. 67, during the reign of Emperor Nero, Saint Peter was crucified—head downward, at his own request—in the middle of a Roman racecourse.

Nero was celebrating his thirteenth year as emperor with bloody entertainments that included every type of torture and execution. Peter, the former Galilean fisherman appointed by Christ as an apostle, had brought Christianity to pagan Rome; he was chief among the emperor's victims.

After Peter's death, some of the faithful built a simple tomb for his remains in the center of a pagan cemetery on Vatican Hill. The tomb soon began drawing pilgrims, and over the next few years their number steadily increased.

The Roman Catholic Church grew from Peter's apostolate in Rome, and from his grave site grew the Basilica of Saint Peter and the Vatican palaces that today serve as the center of the faith and a magnet for the faithful from around the world.

The apostle Paul, a tentmaker and scholar before his conversion, traveled widely in the ancient world spreading the gospel. His travels were perilous; he was flogged, stoned, shipwrecked, imprisoned, and banished from numerous cities, until his ministry ended in Rome; he was beheaded there by Nero, probably in the same year that Saint Peter was crucified. His martyrdom similarly drew an increasing number of pilgrims over the following decades.

It was after the year 313, however, that pilgrimage to Rome increased enormously. With the Peace of the Church—when Emperor Constantine I legalized Christianity throughout the empire following his own conversion—there was a flurry of church building in Rome that included a basilica on Vatican Hill over the old cemetery. The Basilica of Peter the Apostle was richly decorated and furnished and began attracting pilgrims from the far reaches of the empire. Another basilica, San Paolo fuori le Mura (Saint Paul's outside the Walls) was built by Constantine to enshrine Saint Paul's tomb.

By the late fourth century, crowds of pilgrims came to worship at both basilicas and at the catacombs, the vast network of underground cemeteries where early Christians held their forbidden services and hid from frequent persecutions.

Saint Jerome, about A.D. 365, described crowds of visitors at the catacombs and martyr churches in Rome; and Saint John Chrysostom, writing in 387, spoke of the heads of state, generals, and consuls who were traveling to Rome to venerate the tombs of Saints Peter and Paul—"a fisherman and a tentmaker."

As Rome declined as an imperial power, both the role of the city as the center of the Christian faith and pilgrim traffic increased. Scholae, or hostels, were built for pilgrims from different nations; the earliest is believed to have been built by King Ine of Wessex about 730.

By the Middle Ages, pilgrimages to Rome had become entirely too popular in the view of some church officials. In canon law, the usual penalty for striking a cleric was a pilgrimage to Rome, because forgiveness for this crime could only be granted by the pope. But historians say that with the rise of the universities the penalty had to be abolished—too many students were taking advantage of it.

Pope Boniface VIII, in 1300, proclaiming the first Holy Year, prescribed visits to the basilicas of Saint Peter and Saint Paul as required of all pilgrims. In 1350 Pope Clement VI added Saint John Lateran (San Giovanni in Laterano); and in 1400 Pope Urban VI added Saint Mary Major (Santa Maria Maggiore). Ever since, visits to these four basilicas have been the custom for pilgrims to Rome.

By the late fifteenth century, Constantine's Basilica of Saint Peter had fallen into disrepair and was structurally unsound. Over the next two centuries, it was replaced by the present basilica and the buildings of today's Vatican.

The Vatican's spiritual, historical, and architectural wonders are well known, from Saint Peter's (the world's largest church and among the highest architectural achievements of the Renaissance) to the famed Sistine Chapel and the Vatican Museums.

Saint Paul's outside the Walls (so called because it was beyond the walls of the old city) was originally even larger than Saint Peter's. It eventually fell into disuse and disrepair and remained neglected until the eleventh century, when it was restored and again became a center of pilgrimage. In 1823 fire destroyed all but the cloisters; and although the original basilica was replaced, only the cloisters give an idea of the first building's grandeur.

The Basilica of San Giovanni in Laterano is the Cathedral of Rome and the official seat of the Bishop of Rome—the pope. Its present facade, which dates from the mid-1930s, mimics that of Saint Peter's. Much of the rest of the present building is about a century older, although parts of its predecessor structures remain, dating back to Constantine's time.

Among San Giovanni's relics, enshrined in a fourteenth-century Gothic tabernacle, are what are believed to be the heads of Saint Peter and Saint Paul. Nearby, in a sixteenth-century building, are the Holy Steps (Scala Santa), which are said to be the marble steps from Pontius Pilate's palace in Jerusalem.

The fourth church requiring a visit by the true pilgrim, Santa Maria Maggiore, has had far less rebuilding and is therefore one of the oldest churches in Rome, dating from about 440. Legend holds that the Virgin Mary appeared to Pope Sixtus III and ordered him to build a church in her honor at a place, in Rome, where snow would fall on August 5. The snow fell, the church is on that spot, and the miraculous event is commemorated every August 5 with the feast of the Madonna of the Snows. During a special mass, white rose petals cascade from the ceiling.

There are many more churches awaiting the modern pilgrim. Rome is a city of churches, many of them of considerable historical, religious, and architectural importance. Among the more noteworthy are:

- Saint Andrea della Frate, where there was an apparition of the Blessed Virgin in 1842
- Il Gesu, mother church of the Jesuits, designed in 1568 and second only to Saint Peter's in the opulence of its decoration
- the shrine of Saint Philip Neri, founder of the Oratorians, in the Chiesa Nuova (new church), formally known as the Church of Santa Maria in Vallicella
- San Pietro in Vincoli (Saint Peter in Chains), which was built to hold the chains with which Saint Peter was bound after his arrest in Rome, and which houses Michelangelo's famous statue of Moses

Papal Audiences

Most pilgrims hope for an audience with the pope, and this is frequently possible. The pope holds mass audiences on Wednesday mornings. From March to October, they are held in Saint Peter's Square or at the summer papal residence at Castel Gandolfo; during the winter, they are held in an auditorium that holds about 7,000 people. Tickets are required and must be applied for in advance; one of the most convenient ways to obtain them is through a tour operator or travel agency.

When the pope is in Rome, he also makes a weekly appearance at the window of the Vatican Palace on Sunday at noon.

Elsewhere in Rome

For the modern pilgrim, the possibility of seeing the pope and visiting the shrines of the Apostles may be the main purpose of the voyage, but the relics of Rome's ancient glory are there as well. These are among the most noteworthy:

- The Colosseum, ancient Rome's most famous building, dates from the first century A.D. As many as 80,000 Romans of all classes—from Caesar to slave—would fill the huge amphitheater in its heyday to witness spectacles of savage brutality put on as public entertainment.
- The Roman Forum, the heart of Rome before imperial times, is in ruins. Some of these date from about 500 B.C.; others from about A.D. 400.
- The Pantheon, the "home of the gods," was built by Emperor Hadrian in the second century A.D. and converted into a church four centuries later.
- Trajan's Column was built to memorialize the Emperor Trajan's successful second-century campaign in Yugoslavia.
- Also of note are the many monuments of Renaissance Rome, the city's numerous museums and galleries, its parks and gardens, and its scores of fountains—a fixture of the city even in ancient times.

Elsewhere in Italy

Italy has numerous shrines marking the sites of apparitions of the Blessed Virgin. Among them are those at Caravaggio (dating from 1432), Crema (1490), Monte Figogna in Genoa (1490), Monte Berico (1426), Monte Nero in Livorno province (1345), Montallegro in Rapallo (1537), and Savona (1536), where the basilica is a national architectural monument.

Loreto, near the Adriatic coast in the region of the Marches, possesses one of the world's most popular shrines, the Holy House of the Blessed Virgin. Now enclosed in the basilica of Santa Maria of Loreto, the 31-by-13-foot stone structure is said to have been the house of the Blessed Virgin in Nazareth. According to tradition, angels moved the house from Nazareth after the fall of the Latin Kingdom of Jerusalem (1291), taking it originally to a place near Fiume (Rijeka) in modern-day Croatia. When it was not properly venerated there, the angels moved it three more times; on the third move, it reached its present site.

The town of Loreto is dominated by the basilica, which includes the work of numerous noted Italian architects. The basilica, and the town, are often thronged by pilgrims; the busiest times are Easter and the Feast of the Holy House in early December.

Assisi, not far to the west of Loreto in Umbria, is another major pilgrimage destination. Saint Francis—founder of the Franciscans, the largest of all religious orders—was born in Assisi in 1181 and the town is dominated by reminders of his life and work. The impressive basilica of San Francesco, one of Italy's most famous monuments, was begun shortly after Saint Francis's death in 1226. His remains are enshrined there.

Shrines elsewhere in Italy honor the founders of two other religious orders—the shrine of Saint Benedict at Monte Cassino and the shrine of Saint Dominic at church of San Domenico in Bologna.

Padua, near Venice, attracts pilgrims year-round but particularly on Saint Anthony's feast day, June 13. The basilica of San'Antonio is one of the city's principal sights and includes notable bronze work by the early Renaissance sculptor Donatello.

Bari, an Adriatic port city in Apulia, is known for its basilica of San Nicola (Saint Nicholas), built to house the remains of the early fourth-century saint when they were brought to Bari from Myra (in today's Turkey) by Italian soldiers in 1087. The basilica was the only building left standing after the sacking of Bari by the Normans in 1152.

Turin, in Piedmont-Valle d'Aosta, draws pilgrims largely because of the Holy Shroud, believed by many to be the cloth in which Christ's body was wrapped when he was taken from the cross. The shroud is kept in Turin's fifteenth-century cathedral, in the black marble Capella della Sacra Sindone (Chapel of the Holy Shroud).

Transport

Getting to Rome by air from the United States can be easily arranged from all major airports. Numerous tour operators offer pilgrimage packages of various durations, sometimes combining Rome with the Holy Land or with the Marian shrine at Medjugorje in Bosnia.

Rome is well served by public transportation, but visitors keen on seeing as much as possible should be prepared to do considerable walking; much in the old city cannot be reached by a vehicle of any kind. The city is linked by air, rail, and road with the rest of Italy and Europe.

Accommodation

Rome offers all types of accommodation in all price ranges. Most major American hotel chains are represented. Restaurants of every sort are also plentiful, from fast food to haute cuisine.

LOURDES

Lourdes, in the French Pyrenees, is the most frequented pilgrimage site of the Catholic world, surpassing both Rome and Jerusalem.

The town has a population of only 18,000, but between Easter and October each year it draws between four million and five million visitors, making it France's most often visited city after Paris.

Lourdes has been drawing pilgrims since 1858, when the Blessed Virgin appeared to 14-year-old Bernadette Soubirous, the daughter of an impoverished local miller, in the Massabielle grotto along the Gave de Pau river. There were 18 further apparitions over the following few months. During the ninth of these, Bernadette dug at the ground with her hands and a gush of water was released from a previously unknown spring. Belief spread that the water had miraculous healing powers, and crowds began to accompany her to the grotto. As the apparitions continued, the throng grew to about 8,000 and armed soldiers had to escort her.

Local church authorities remained skeptical for some time. After a four-year investigation, the miracle was authenticated by Rome, the visions proclaimed authentic, devotion to Notre Dame de Lourdes authorized, and a sanctuary erected over the grotto. The first organized procession was held in 1864.

The grotto has since been restored to the condition it was in at the time of Bernadette's visions, although the river has been diverted some distance from its entrance. A statue of the Virgin stands in the natural recess in which the apparition first appeared. At the statue's foot are inscribed the words in the Gascon dialect that Bernadette heard on March 25, 1858: "Que soy era Immaculada Councepciou (I am the Immaculate Conception)."

Bernadette became a nun and died in 1879, at age 35, at a convent in Nevers, France. She was canonized in 1933.

The annual pilgrimage season begins at Easter, when Lourdes is the site of the Festival International de Musique Sacrée, and continues through October. There are now six official annual pilgrimages, the most important on August 15, the Feast of the Assumption, and that date marks the height of the season.

The Caverne des Apparitions, better known as La Grotte, where Bernadette experienced the apparitions, is the focus of the town. During the pilgrimage season there are long lines, including many elderly or ailing pilgrims seeking miraculous cures.

Among other sites related to Bernadette in Lourdes is the Musée Bernadette, a museum that is devoted to her life and that also offers an illustrated history of the pilgrimages. There is also the Moulin des Boly, the mill where she was born on January 7, 1844, and the "shabby little room" in the Cachot, a disused jail where her family lived at the time of the apparitions; both are open to visitors.

Lourdes has two nineteenth-century basilicas (Basilique Supérieure, 1871, and Basilique du Rosaire, 1889) in the New Gothic and Romano-Byzantine styles, respectively (one guidebook comments: "Their spiritual function far outweighs their aesthetic appeal"), as well as the vast underground Basilique Saint-Pie X, the world's largest underground church. The latter was consecrated in 1958 to mark the centenary of the apparitions and can hold up to 20,000 worshippers.

In season, particularly during the weeks following August 15, Lourdes is extremely busy and crowds can be daunting. While many visitors are true pilgrims, many are simply sightseers.

In a mixture of religion and commerce, there are scores of souvenir shops offering religious keepsakes ranging from the inexpensive to the quite expensive. Restaurants of all types abound, from haute cuisine to pizza.

Lourdes has more than 350 hotel rooms at all prices. Some hotels are run by religious organizations and are specifically for pilgrims as opposed to tourists.

Out of season, there are few pilgrims or tourists. As a consequence, most shops are shuttered and the majority of the restaurants and hotels are closed.

Earlier History

Before 1858, Lourdes was a much-disputed fortress. A former feudal chateau, Lourdes Castle, perched on a rocky outcrop, became a prison in the seventeenth century and was later a barracks. It is now Musée Pyrénéen, considered to be one of France's best provincial museums, devoted to popular customs and arts throughout the Pyrenees and Béarn regions.

In the Region

Lourdes has been called the Gateway to the Pyrenees, and the region is known for its dramatic mountain scenery. It is an easy day trip to nearby Pau or Cauterets, and train and bus service are excellent in season. Other nearby destinations offer points of scenic, religious, and historic interest.

One of France's most renowned spas and resorts, Cauterets is 19 miles (an hour by bus) from Lourdes and only about eight miles from the Spanish border. It is located in a scenic valley on the edge of the Parc National des Pyrénées Occidentales, which attracts international crowds to its green pastures and extensive network of hiking trails.

Since Roman times, Cauterets has been known for its hot springs, revered as a miracle cure for female sterility and ailments of the throat, sinuses, and ears. The town and spa were visited and lauded by Rabelais, Victor Hugo, George Sand, and Viscount François René de Chateaubriand. The Cauterets region also offers some of the best skiing in the Pyrenees, both downhill and cross-country. In some years, skiing lasts until May.

About 25 miles northwest of Lourdes, Pau is the historic capital of Béarn. Early in the nineteenth century, it became popular as a winter resort for the wealthy British, who once made up a third of its population. The vacationers created France's first golf course there in 1856, introduced fox hunting, and launched the Pont-Long steeplechase, which remains a popular attraction. Pau's chateau, built in the fourteenth century, was turned into a Renaissance palace in the sixteenth century by Marguerite d'Angoulême, sister of King François I. Her grandson, Henri IV, was born there in 1553.

Gavarnie, about 20 miles from Cauterets, is at the foot of the Cirque de Gavarnie, one of the world's most remarkable examples of glacial erosion. When the upper snows melt, numerous streams cascade from the cliffs to form spectacular waterfalls, the longest of which falls nearly 1,400 feet.

Among other towns of note in the area are Saint-Savin, an important religious center in the Bigorre region; Argelès-Gazost, a popular summer resort and spa with a church dating from the tenth and eleventh centuries; Barèges, which offers a spa, casino, and winter sports; Bagnères de Luchon, an area known for its shooting, hiking, and ski resorts (and where the spa waters are said to benefit the vocal cords); and Bagnères de Bigorre, another popular spa known since Roman times, which boasts a fifteenth-century church and convent, and the remains of the thirteenth-century Cloître Saint-Jean.

POITIERS

The ancient city of Poitiers in west central France has been an important religious center since the fourth century, largely because of its first bishop, the scholarly Saint Hilary.

Its roots go considerably deeper. Poitiers sits on a promontory at the confluence of the rivers Clain and Vienne that was occupied from very early times. In the Roman era, it was known as Limonum and was the seat of the propraetor of Aquitania from Caesar's conquest of Gaul until the barbarian invasion of 276.

But it was Hilary—the leading theologian of Western Christianity of his time—whose influence brought the city to prominence as the destination of pilgrims and a hub of religious activity in the early days of Christianity in Europe. Many signs of that early importance remain, among them the oldest Christian building in France: the Baptistère Saint-Jean (Baptistry of Saint John).

Hilary was born into a distinguished family at Poitiers in 315 and trained in philosophy and the classics. He married and had a daughter, Abra, before his conversion to Christianity in early manhood. His conversion came about, he wrote, through his study of the Bible and how its teachings contrasted with the materialism of pagan mythology.

Hilary became Bishop of Poitiers in 353 and soon became embroiled in the controversy over Arianism, a heresy that negates the Holy Trinity by denying the divinity of Christ. His anti-Arian efforts resulted in his exile to Phrygia (in what is now central Turkey) from 356 to 359 by Emperor Constantius II. His opposition to Arianism continued, however; he was released from exile in large part because his enemies in Phrygia regarded him as a "sower of discord and the troublemaker of the Orient." He was allowed to return to his episcopacy at Poitiers in 360, and his persecution over Arianism ended with Constantius's death the following year.

Hilary spent the rest of his life repairing the damage Arianism had done to the church in Gaul and Italy. He preached, wrote, and suffered exile in defense of the divinity of Christ, strengthening the faith of the clergy and laity in this fundamental dogma.

Soon after his return to Poitiers, Hilary had one of his disciples, who was later to be Saint Martin of Tours, found the nearby monastery of Ligugé, probably the first monastery in France.

Hilary died at Poitiers in 368 (the date is uncertain) and was proclaimed a doctor of the church by Pope Pius IX in 1851. His tomb is in the eleventh-century Church of Saint-Hilaire-le-Grand, one of Poitiers's many noteworthy religious monuments.

Poitiers's importance increased over the centuries. Clovis defeated the Visigoths near the city in 507, and it became part of the Frankish kingdom; in 732, Charles Martel stopped an Arab expedition from Spain near Poitiers; as the capital of the Duchy of Aquitaine, it was fought over for years by the French and English. Charles II often held court there and founded a university. Joan of Arc went there in 1429 to have her mission studied and approved.

Benedictine abbeys arose in Poitiers, then other religious houses founded by Jesuits (1604), Calvairiennes (1617), and Brothers of Saint John of God (1619). John Calvin was among numerous scholars associated with Poitiers, and the first Calvinist confession of faith was composed there in 1558.

Noteworthy Buildings

Radegunda (later Saint Radegunda), wife of King Clothar, founded a convent of nuns at Poitiers in 552, and in 569 it was dedicated to the Holy Cross upon presentation of a relic of the Cross by Emperor Justin II. Radegunda founded the Church of Saint Mary outside the convent's walls and was buried there in 587. Pilgrimages to her tomb are as popular as those to Saint Hilary's. A stone at her tomb is said to bear the footprint of Christ, left when he visited her just before her death.

The oldest religious building in Poitiers—and in all of France—is Saint Hilary's Baptistry of Saint John.

Begun in the fourth century and enlarged in the seventh and eleventh centuries, it includes an octagonal baptismal pool fed by a Roman aqueduct. It is now a museum dedicated to the Merovingians, the first dynasty of Franks to rule that part of Europe.

At the church of Notre-Dame-la-Grande, built in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, one finds the venerated sixteenth-century statue of Our Lady of the Keys, commemorating the deliverance of Poitiers from a siege. The building is held to be one of France's most outstanding examples of Romanesque architecture.

Saint-Hilaire-le-Grand, consecrated in 1049, which contains Saint Hilary's tomb, is noted for its twelfth-century murals.

Other religious buildings include Saint-Jean-de-Montierneuf, consecrated in 1096, Saint-Porchaire (1520), and a seventeenth-century Jesuit college, now a lyceum.

Transport

As a major center, Poitiers is easily reached by road and rail. The journey from Paris, which has the nearest international airports, is about 160 miles.

In the Region

Poitiers is equidistant from a number of noteworthy cities. Within 80 miles are Angoulême, Limoges, and Châteauroux. Tours and the Loire valley are also nearby.

Niort, about 45 miles southwest of Poitiers, contains the remains of a castle built by the English kings Henry II and his son, Richard the Lion-Hearted. It now houses a museum with a major collection of costumes and arms.

West of Niort is the region known as Marais Poitevin, also called the Green Venice because of its extensive network of canals running through a patchwork of fields. Small boats can be rented in local villages, with guides and without. In the region are the ruins of the Abbaye de Maillezais, once a bishop's seat as well as an influential monastery. The earliest part of the ruins dates from the eleventh century.

West of the Marais Poitevin, on the sea, is La Rochelle, with its picturesque harbor on the buttress by two fourteenth-century towers. Boats leave daily in summer for the islands of Ré (with its oyster beds and vineyards), Aix, and Oléron.

The former Abbey of Ligugé, founded by Saint Martin under Hilary's direction and probably France's earliest monastery, is about five miles south of Poitiers. Gallo-Roman remains have been identified, including the apse of the fourth-century basilica built by Martin, as well as some fifth- and sixth-century Merovingian tombs. The nearby Church of Saint-Martin dates from the sixteenth century.

Tours, about 80 miles north of Poitiers, was a highly frequented pilgrimage site and religious center from the fourth century. It is known for its numerous churches and other religious buildings, including the tombs of Saint Martin and Saint Gregory.

TOURS

In the early Middle Ages, Tours—in the Loire valley of west central France—was the most famous and most frequented pilgrimage center in Christendom. For centuries, monarchs and popes were among those who came to pay homage or seek favor at the shrine of Saint Martin.

Martin was Bishop of Tours from 371 to 397, and two aspects of his episcopacy are of basic importance: He evangelized the countryside, establishing the first six rural parishes in France, and he gave monks an important role in this apostolate.

Martin was born about 316 along the Danube in Upper Pannonia, now part of Hungary, and was raised in Pavia, Italy. His parents were pagans, but he became a catechumen on his own initiative at about the age of 10. When he was 15, he enrolled in the imperial cavalry, a move that may have been required because he was a Roman officer's son.

While Martin was stationed at Amiens, an incident is said to have taken place that tradition has made famous. According to the legend, on a bitter winter day he saw an old man at the gates of the city, starving, nearly naked, and begging for alms. Martin removed his own cloak, cut it in half with his sword, and gave one piece to the beggar. That night, in his sleep, he saw Christ—dressed in the half of the cloak he had given away—and heard him say, "Martin, yet a catechumen, has covered me with this garment."

According to the contemporary historian Sulpicius Severus, the young soldier "flew to be baptized." Thereafter, he described himself as "a soldier of Christ" rather than of Caesar, and within five years he was discharged.

Martin went to Poitiers, where the future Saint Hilary was bishop, and became one of Hilary's disciples. Some time later, he returned to his home and converted his mother and others to Christianity, but his zealous activity there against Arianism (a heresy that negates the Holy Trinity by denying the divinity of Christ) put him in disfavor and forced him into exile.

Martin entered the monastic life at Milan but was driven away by the Arian bishop Auxentius, whereupon he went to the island of Gallinaria in the Gulf of Genoa. Hilary, meanwhile, had been exiled by the Arian Emperor Constantius II and was away from France during the same period. When Hilary was allowed to return to Poitiers in 360, Martin also returned.

Martin established at Ligugé (about five miles south of Poitiers) what may have been the first French monastery, a community of monk-hermits. He lived there for a decade, preaching throughout the countryside, and numerous miracles were attributed to him.

In 371, having been drawn to Tours by a ruse, Martin was consecrated its bishop, an office he is said to have "accepted with great reluctance." Soon afterward, he established another monastic center at nearby Marmoutier and lived there as a monk while carrying out his duties as bishop.

Every year he traveled through the district, visiting each of the outlying parishes. His apostolate extended to Chartres, Paris, Autun, Sens, and Vienne, and he was in a remote part of his diocese—and more than 80 years old—when he died at Candes on November 8, 397.

Legend holds that as his body was being carried by boat to Tours, trees suddenly sprouted leaves, flowers bloomed, and birds sang. In France, the warm period after frost has since been known as "Saint Martin's Summer."

A vast crowd attended Martin's burial at Tours. According to Sulpicius Severus, who had become one of his disciples, more than 2,000 monks were among the mourners.

The Abbey of Saint-Martin became famous. Successive kings of France preserved Martin's cape and kept for themselves the title Abbot of Saint Martin. Martin became the patron saint of France and his feast is November 11, the date of his burial.

The shrine was highly frequented for the next 800 years, but it lost importance in the early thirteenth century as Rome, the Holy Land, Santiago de Compostela in northwestern Spain, and Mont-Saint-Michel in Normandy became more popular.

The monastic community founded at Ligugé grew into a great monastery that continued until 1607 and was revived by the Solesmes Benedictines in 1852.

In 853, a Norman invasion led to the saint's relics being moved to Auxerre, but they were returned in 885.

In all, the relics were dispersed three times: in 853, in 1562, and in 1793, during a campaign of dechristianization late in the French Revolution. The saint's tomb was rediscovered late in 1860.

The modest sanctuary built to hold Saint Martin's remains was replaced in the thirteenth century by a sumptuous basilica. It was sacked by the Huguenots in 1562 during the Wars of Religion, and all that remains are two restored towers. Today, the new Basilica of Saint-Martin, completed in 1924, occupies a corner of the old structure and claims to preserve the tomb in its original location.

Transport

The closest international airports to the Loire valley are the two principal Paris airports, Charles de Gaulle and Orly. The region is served by regular trains from Paris and other major cities. By road, the journey from Paris is about 80 miles.

In the Region

The city of Tours has been an important center since ancient times. It was the capital of the Gallic tribe Turones and a Gallo-Roman civitas under the name Caesarodunum (Caesar's Hill). It increased in importance—particularly as regards the church—throughout the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. Although it suffered heavy damage during World Wars I and II, its surviving monuments have been preserved and restored.

Tours was the home of a number of other saints (among them Saint Gregory, one of Martin's successors as bishop), the monk Alcuin, who was an advisor to Charlemagne and Abbot of Saint-Martin in the eighth century, and such later figures as the painters Jean Fouquet and François Clouet. Another native was Honoré de Balzac, who set much of his writing in Tours.

Old Tours, which includes the basilicas of Saint-Martin, centers on Place Plumereau, with its fifteenth-century half-timbered houses, shops, restaurants, and cafes.

Other religious sites in Tours include the Cathedral of Saint-Gatien, begun in the thirteenth century and completed nearly 300 years later, which shows the full evolution of the Gothic style. The interior includes thirteenth- to fifteenth-century stained-glass windows.

Near the cathedral are the Cloître de la Psalette, with fifteenth- and sixteenth-century frescoes, and the Musée des Beaux-Arts, one of the leading art museums of the Loire valley.

Other cultural attractions, restaurants, and accommodations are plentiful.

Tours is a central point for the exploration of the Loire valley, westward to Angers or eastward to Orléans. The region is known for its wines, scenery, and châteaux.

Angers is about 70 miles west of Tours. Its attractions include a Gothic cathedral, a number of art galleries, and a medieval fortress filled with noted tapestries, among them the 120-yard-long Apocalypse Tapestry, completed in 1390, which illustrates 70 scenes from the Book of Revelation.

Saumur, known for producing about 100,000 tons of mushrooms a year, is between Tours and Angers. Among its sights is an elegant fourteenth-century château, its Musée des Arts Décoratifs, and its Musée du Cheval, which traces the history of the horse.

Nearby is Fontevraud, known for its medieval abbey. Founded in 1099, the abbey contains the tombs of Henry II of England; his wife, Eleanor of Aquitaine; and their son, Richard the Lion-Hearted. Napoleon made the abbey a prison, and it remained one until 1963.

Among the picturesque towns east of Tours are Amboise, with its numerous hotels and restaurants, busy market, and noted château (built on the site of a Stone Age fortress and once a royal palace); Chenonceaux, also the location of a famed château; Loches with its noteworthy Church of Saint-Ours; and the larger center of Blois, whose château is among France's most famous.

Poitiers (see preceding pages), which is closely connected with Saint Martin, is about 80 miles south of Tours. It offers the oldest Christian building in France, Saint Hilary's Baptistery of Saint John, begun in the fourth century. The baptistery is now a Merovingian museum. Among its other noteworthy religious buildings are the Cathedral of Saint-Pierre, built between 1162 and 1271, and Saint-Jean-de-Montierneuf, consecrated in 1096.

LA SALETTE

On September 19, 1846, two peasant children were tending a small herd of cows in a mountain glen near the village La Salette in the French Alps. Suddenly a "beautiful lady," resplendently dressed, appeared before them in a globe of shining light. She was weeping.

The lady gave the two children a message: Unless there was repentance from widespread religious apathy, there would be universal calamity. She asked them to pray and told each of them a secret.

The children—15-year-old Melanie Mathieu-Calvat and 11-year-old Maximin Giraud—were generally disbelieved. But when a spring suddenly appeared at the spot where they saw the apparition and numerous miraculous cures were ascribed to its waters, word spread and pilgrims began coming to the spring in growing numbers.

There was considerable skepticism; it was noted that the children had virtually no secular or religious education—a factor that was argued both in favor of the authenticity of their vision and against it.

The bishop of nearby Grenoble, Philibert de Bruillard, began an inquiry that proved unusually exhaustive, continuing without any announcement for five years. He then ruled that the apparition had the appearance of truth and that there were grounds for believing in it and in the resulting miracles. The result was the authorization of devotion to Our Lady of La Salette.

The children passed the secrets the lady had told them to Pope Pius IX, who confirmed La Salette and the cult. A proper Mass and Office was granted nearly a century later, in 1942.

Neither Maximin nor Melanie became manifest saints, but the authenticity of a vision is not dependent upon the persons to whom it is revealed. Maximin, who died at age 40 in nearby Corps, was quoted as saying "Our Lady left me as I was." Melanie, who lived until 1904, made several efforts to become a religious but did not succeed. Neither ever repudiated their account of the vision.

In 1852, after completing his investigation, Bishop de Bruillard organized a group of diocesan priests to serve at the church being built on the spot at which the apparition took place. From this group grew the Missionaries of Our Lady of La Salette. Their early work was in Norway and Switzerland, and missions were established later in Madagascar, the United States, Canada, Poland, and South America. In the United States, the order has established a number of seminaries and colleges.

In the Region

In any season, the Grenoble region offers much for the visitor, from world-famous ski resorts in winter to spas, lakes, and Alpine scenery in the summer.

Grenoble itself is a large, cosmopolitan city. A cable car climbs to the Fort de la Bastille, a vantage point for panoramic views of the city and the River Isère. Other attractions within the city are the Musée Dauphinois, a regional museum housed in a seventeenth-century convent; the Musée de Peinture et de Sculpture, which offers a noted collection of modern art that includes the work of Picasso, Gauguin, Matisse, and Modigliani; and the church of Saint Laurent, whose sixth-century crypt is one of the oldest Christian structures in France.

North of Grenoble, in the Chartreuse Mountains, is the old town of Chambéry with its fourteenth-century Château des Ducs de Savoie. The gothic château has impressive stained glass and a replica of the Shroud of Turin.

The spa town of Aix-les-Bains on the Lac du Bourget has had thermal baths since Roman times. The Roman Temple of Diana, dating to the second and third centuries, now houses an archaeology museum.

Across the lake from Aix-les-Bains, and accessible by regular boat service, is the Abbaye de Hautecombe, where mass is celebrated with Gregorian chant.

Within easy access of Grenoble are numerous Alpine reserves, among them the Parc du Vercors, the Parc des Ecrins, the Parc du Queyras, and the Parc de la Vanoise. The Italian Alps are to the east, Lyon and the Rhone valley to the west, and Provence to the south.

MONT-SAINT-MICHEL

Silhouetted against the sky atop a towering crag off the Normandy coast, Mont-Saint-Michel is one of the world's most impressive sights.

Historian Henry Adams wrote in 1913 that it was an "assertion of God and Man in a bolder, stronger, closer union than ever was expressed by other art."

More than 500 years in the building, the abbey has withstood storm, war, revolution, fire, and neglect. But through it all, as the principal shrine of the Archangel Michael, it has drawn pilgrims from far and wide for nearly 13 centuries.

The abbey's origins go back to the early eighth century when the archangel appeared in a vision to Aubert, bishop of nearby Avranches, and commanded him to build a chapel in his honor on the rocky hill. At the time the hill was known as Mont Tombe and rose from a dense forest. But not long afterward the sea inundated the forest and the hill became an island, isolated from the mainland by fast-moving tides that rise as much as 45 feet.

The bishop built a small circular oratory, which soon attracted pilgrims. Two centuries later, in 966, Richard I, Duke of Normandy, established a Benedictine abbey at the site and replaced Aubert's small chapel with a rectangular Carolingian structure. In 1017, Richard II was married there and ordered construction of a Romanesque church. This took 60 years to build, and was no sooner complete than Abbot Hildebert II ordered that the 250-foot summit of the rock be leveled to build still another new church, the first step in a plan to cover the rock with monastic buildings. That goal was finally accomplished in 1520 with the elaborate Gothic and Romanesque complex that remains today.

In the meantime Mont-Saint-Michel had become a center of medieval intellectual life and was drawing pilgrims from across Europe. Thus it remained for about a century, until a long period of decline set in; discipline waned and the size of the abbey community dwindled, although Maurists (given charge of the abbey in 1622) remained there in decreasing numbers until the French Revolution.

During the eighteenth century the abbey was used in part to imprison enemies of the crown, and its status as a prison became official with the Revolution. It continued to serve only that function, notoriously, until Emperor Napoleon III—responding to a public outcry—shut it down in 1863. A decade later, it was declared a public monument and restoration began.

Since 1922 the monastery church has been once again a place of worship, and monks have been able to live and work on the Mont for the past quarter century.

The complex includes the Church of Saint Michael at the top, a cloister, a medieval refectory and crypts, great halls, and the monks' residence. A town clusters at the feet of the abbey, complete with inns, restaurants, and a profusion of religious and secular souvenir shops.

Because of the throngs who visit Mont-Saint-Michel during the summer, many pilgrims opt for the off-season, from September to May.

In the Region

Because of its location on the sea at the western edge of Normandy, Mont-Saint-Michel has been at the crossroads of conflict time and again. In 1066 Norman forces en route to the Battle of Hastings made their last stop there before crossing the Channel to England. During the Hundred Years War (1337–1453) it was attacked repeatedly. In more recent times, it was near heavy fighting during the Invasion of Normandy in World War II.

About 45 miles northeast of Mont-Saint-Michel is Saint-Lo, which played a pivotal role in the Battle of Normandy in 1944 and was almost totally destroyed in the process. It lies inland, but near the Calvados Coast beaches of Operation Overlord, known by the code names Utah, Omaha, Gold, Juno, and Sword. Omaha, where nearly 10,000 American troops died, is near the town of Colleville-sur-Mer. The Monument du Débarquement near there stands among the largely undisturbed remains of bunkers and trenches. The Musée du Débarquement at Arromanches chronicles the invasion, and remnants of one of the floating harbors built for the invasion can still be seen in the bay.

A short distance inland is Bayeux, which offers the Bayeux Tapestry, a 225-foot scroll embroidered in 1067 that depicts the story of William the Conqueror's victory in the Battle of Hastings the year before. Other attractions in Bayeux include the Cathédrale Notre-Dame, a notable combination of Gothic and Norman design, and another museum tracing the events of June through August 1944, the Musée de la Bataille de Normandie.

Seventeen miles from Bayeux is Caen, which also has a museum on the Normandy Landings (the Mémorial). The town is also known for its Abbaye aux Hommes (Men's Abbey), a monastery built by William the Conqueror, and Abbaye aux Dames (Women's Abbey) built by his wife, Matilda.

The nearby coastal towns of Cabourg, Honfleur, Trouville, and Deauville have long been among northern France's preferred vacation spots.

Farther along the coast is Fecamp, an ancient fishing port that was once Normandy's principal pilgrimage destination. The pilgrims were drawn by what was believed to be a vial of Christ's blood, brought there in the seventh century. The town became the home of the monastic order of the Précieux Sang et de la Trinité, and its impressive Eglise la Trinité stands as evidence of Fecamp's religious history. The town is also where the liqueur Benedictine originates.

In another direction, Mont-Saint-Michel is also within reach of Chartres and its renowned cathedral. Chartres has drawn pilgrims since the earliest years of the Christian era (see following pages).

CHARTRES

Few cathedrals equal the grandeur of Notre-Dame de Chartres, often called the supreme monument of High Gothic architecture. For centuries, pilgrims making their way to Chartres have been inspired by the sight of its soaring towers, visible from miles away.

But pilgrims were traveling to Chartres long before the present cathedral was built in the late twelfth century. Druids had considered the place sacred as early as 100 B.C., and were converted to Christianity about 45 A.D. Then, in 876, according to tradition, the Sacred Tunic, worn by the Blessed Virgin at the time of Jesus's birth, was given to Chartres by Emperor Charles II (Charles the Bald). Over the centuries, this holy relic drew throngs of pilgrims from across Europe.

By the eleventh century Chartres had become a leading religious and intellectual center. When much of the town was devastated by fire in June 1194, its cathedral—the fifth to occupy the site—was left in ruins. However, word went out that the Sacred Tunic had been miraculously spared and the resulting religious fervor was such that a new cathedral was built in the exceptionally short period of 26 years.

In the Middle Ages religious and worldly matters were tightly interlinked, and this was very much so in Chartres. The rebuilding of the cathedral drew contributions of every kind, from financial support to physical labor. Thousands of the faithful came to Chartres from far and wide, and peasants and nobles worked side by side at such tasks as pulling carts laden with building stone from remote quarries. By 1220 the new cathedral, the building that exists today, had risen from the ashes.

Pilgrimage continued and increased over the next five centuries, but came to a virtual halt with the French Revolution of 1789 and its aftermath. During that era, in 1793, the Sacred Tunic was cut up and dispersed; part of it, however, has been recovered and pilgrimage is once again on the rise.

The Cathedral

Notre-Dame de Chartres embodies a history of High Gothic architecture from the twelfth century to the sixteenth. While most of its construction was in the early years of the thirteenth century, numerous features were added later—the taller (and more ornate) of its famed spires, for example. The cathedral also includes several important features of the twelfth-century Romanesque church it replaced, among them its west facade with its noteworthy sculpture and stained glass.

The cathedral's twelfth- and thirteenth-century stained glass is among its best-known features, particularly the rich "Chartres blue" used in many of its 176 windows. Much of the glass has been cleaned and restored in recent years.

The total length of the building is 428 feet, and its vault rises to 118 feet. Built on the Latin-cross plan, it was largely inspired by the Abbey of Saint-Denis in Paris.

Also in Chartres, and also a magnet for pilgrims, is a holy well that is reputedly the resting place of first-century martyrs.

Behind the cathedral is the former Bishop's Palace, now the Musée des Beaux-Arts (Museum of Fine Arts), dating from the eighteenth century.

Other churches in Chartres known for their outstanding architecture and early stained glass are the Eglise Saint-Aignan and the Eglise Saint-Pierre.

Transport and Accommodation

Chartres, a small city of about 30,000 population, is about 50 miles southwest of Paris and easily accessible from the capital by car, train, or bus. Accommodation and restaurants are plentiful in all price ranges.

In the Region

North of Chartres is Evreux, a town that has stood in the path of war for centuries. The town was repeatedly ravaged by the Vandals, the Normans, the English, and several French monarchs, and saw action as recently as World War II. Its Cathédrale Notre-Dame has been a victim of hostilities from the twelfth century on, but in its present state is a prime example of Flamboyant Gothic architecture.

Les Andelys, on the banks of the Seine on a byway between Evreux and Rouen, offers the remains of Château de Gaillard, a castle built by English king Richard I (Richard the Lion-Hearted) in 1196.

Rouen, although it suffered considerable damage in World War II, is known as the City of a Hundred Spires. Chief among its many religious buildings is Cathédrale Notre-Dame, a Gothic masterpiece. Among others considered noteworthy are the Flamboyant Eglise Saint-Maclou and the modern Eglise Jeanne d'Arc, dedicated to that saint and built on the spot where she was burned at the stake in 1431.

Also within reach of Chartres is the famed Abbey of Mont-Saint-Michel on its rocky coastal island near the border of Normandy and Brittany (see preceding pages).

CZĘSTOCHOWA

More than a million pilgrims are drawn each year to Częstochowa in south-central Poland by the renowned icon Our Lady of Częstochowa, also known as the Black Madonna.

The wooden icon is said to have miraculous powers and has been the object of veneration for centuries. It was brought to Częstochowa in 1382 by Prince Ladislaus Opolszyk (Władysław of Opole) from his castle in Belz in the Ukraine. The prince founded a monastery of Paulite monks to care for the icon, and the original shrine church on Jasna Góra (Bright Hill) was built in 1386.

According to tradition, the icon was painted by Saint Luke on a tablet manufactured by Saint Joseph for the Holy Family, was taken from Jerusalem to Constantinople, and in the late tenth century was given to Princess Anna, wife of Vladimir of Kiev.

Soon after its arrival in Częstochowa, the icon—known as the Black Madonna because the faces and hands of the Virgin and Child are dark—began attracting pilgrims. Cuts on the Virgin's right cheek are said to have resulted from desecration in 1430 by thieves who became enraged when they found the icon becoming heavier and heavier as they tried to carry it away. Another version of the legend says that a Hussite soldier, unable to dislodge the picture, slashed the face with his sword, whereupon blood issued from the wounds.

The monastery was fortified in the 1620s and in 1655 withstood a siege by invading antipapal Swedes who by that time had subdued much of Poland. The icon was credited with keeping the monastery unconquered, and this further increased its popularity as an object of devotion. Our Lady of Częstochowa was acclaimed Queen of Poland the following year and became the symbol of Polish nationalism and religious liberty. In 1717, the icon was crowned in the name of Pope Clement XI.

The icon now hangs above the altar in the north chapel of the monastery church. Twice daily, a protective cover is ceremoniously drawn up before a large congregation.

Today, the monastery walls are covered with small replicas of arms, legs, and other parts of the body left by pilgrims in thanks for miraculous cures. Considered one of the richest of shrines in terms of such tributes, its museum and treasury contain an array of offerings presented by generations of the faithful as well as a noteworthy collection of church vestments and furnishings.

The priory established by Prince Ladislaus in 1382 founded numerous daughter houses in Poland and elsewhere and received numerous grants from successive kings of Poland who came there to venerate the icon. The existing church on Jasna Góra dates from 1644 and its 344-foot tower from 1701.

The icon was restored in 1925, making a full examination possible. Until then, only the faces and hands of the Virgin and Child had been visible, much of the remainder of the icon having been encased in precious metals. According to the New Catholic Encyclopedia, the icon probably is of ninth-century Greek or Greek-Italian origin with thirteenth-century overpaintings. Many icons have been attributed to Saint Luke the Evangelist, but the church cautions that the origin of this tradition cannot be traced with certainty.

Nonetheless, the shrine is considered the holiest in a nation that is 90 percent Roman Catholic. The high point of the pilgrimage season is August 15, when hundreds of thousands arrive in Częstochowa—many of them on foot as a sign of penance—for Assumption Day observances that coincide with a celebration of the harvest. Vendors selling fresh fruit, vegetables, and flowers set up shop next to others offering statuettes, likenesses of the pope, and other religious mementos.

In the Region

The city of Częstochowa, on the River Warta, is a growing industrial center with a population of more than 250,000. It lies about 68 miles from Cracow and about 135 miles from Warsaw.

The route from Częstochowa to Cracow passes through some of Poland's most scenic country, the Cracow Jurs, the Pradnik valley, and the Ojców National Park. Fourteen medieval castles (nicknamed eagles' nests) perch on cliffs along the route. Most are in ruins, but one—Pieskowa Skała (Dog's Rock)—has been restored and is open to the public.

Also along the route is Wadowice, the small village about 35 miles from Cracow that was the birthplace of Pope John Paul II and has itself become a popular pilgrimage destination.

Cracow—a city of about 750,000 and long the intellectual and historic heart of Poland—is emerging from years of hardship and repression and is again becoming one of Europe's favored tourist destinations.

Cracow's streets offer medieval and Renaissance churches (more than 60 in all), castles, and stately homes. There are also a sixteenth-century synagogue and the Jagiellonian University, founded in 1364, which numbers Copernicus and Pope John Paul II among its alumni.

An outstanding attraction is the thirteenth-century Wawel royal castle and its cathedral, which overlook the city from a high limestone hill above the Vistula River. A complex of Gothic and Renaissance buildings, this was Poland's royal residence for more than five centuries (until the end of the sixteenth century, when the capital was transferred to Warsaw). Sharing the cathedral's vaults with most of the Polish kings and their families are the revered nationalist leaders General Tadeusz Kosciuszko (1746–1817) and Marshal Józef Piłsudski (1867–1935).

It was from the cathedral that Karol Cardinal Wojtyła set out in 1978 for the Vatican conclave that elected him pope.

Among Cracow's other noteworthy religious attractions are the two-tiered Church of Saint Andrzej (eleventh century) and, next door to it, the Church of Saints Peter and Paul, Cracow's first Baroque structure. On the nearby market square are the imposing Mariacki Church, with its towers of uneven heights, and the smaller Saint Adalbert's.

The city's old Jewish district, Kazimierz, is a short walk from Wawel.

Only about 15 miles from Częstochowa is Oświęcim, notorious under its German name, Auschwitz, as the site of the Nazis' principal concentration camp. There, and at nearby Birkenau, between two million and four million people were put to death between 1940 and 1945. The camp at Auschwitz is now a national museum dedicated to the memory of those who died in the Nazi Holocaust.

Warsaw, the Polish capital, is 135 miles northeast of Częstochowa. Unlike Cracow, which remained largely unscathed, Warsaw was 75 percent destroyed during World War II. It was rebuilt during the 1950s and 1960s under Russian domination; then, as economic times grew harder, it fell largely into disrepair. During the 1990s, however, it has been getting a facelift and is regaining popularity with foreign visitors.

Since Poland's emergence from Communist rule, changes in the Warsaw streetscape have been dramatic, with boutiques, fast-food restaurants, and modern cafes taking the place of the shops of butchers, tailors, and shoemakers.

Among noteworthy Warsaw sites are the Palace of Culture and Science (a gift from Stalin during the 1950s) and the great square surrounding it, the elegant Aleje Ujazdowski leading to the Belvedere Palace (now the official presidential residence), and the Łazienki Palace and park.

As Poland's capital, Warsaw is well served by bus, train, and air transportation and has regular connections with major cities not far from its borders, among them Prague and Vienna.

A route between Warsaw and Częstochowa (avoiding the major manufacturing city of Łódź) passes through the picturesque Holy Cross Mountains.

Just across the Czech border is Brno (population about 385,000), at the confluence of the Svatka and Svitava rivers in the eastern foothills of the Bohemian-Moravian region. Several churches survive from the nineteenth century, when Brno was a monastic center. The botanist Gregor Mendel (1822–1884) performed his genetic experiments at the Augustinian monastery there.

FÁTIMA

On May 13, 1917, in the desolate landscape near the small Portuguese village of Fátima, three shepherd children saw a light shining from just above the branches of a holm oak. The Blessed Virgin appeared, "a lady brighter than the sun," and asked them to pray for world peace.

War was raging across Europe. Russia was in the midst of the Bolshevik revolution. Portugal itself had been experiencing political violence and a succession of short-lived governments.

All three children—10-year-old Lúcia dos Santos and her cousins Francisco, 9, and Jacinta, 7—saw the figure standing on a cloud just above the tree. Lúcia and Jacinta heard her speak.

The lady asked the children to return to the same spot on the thirteenth of each month and said that in October she would reveal her identity and what she desired.

The children did as they were asked. About 50 people accompanied them in June, 1,000 in July. On August 13, they were kidnapped by the civil prefect of Outrem and interrogated for two days, but the lady appeared to them on August 19 and promised that in October a miracle would occur. By September the throng accompanying the children had grown to 30,000, and by October it exceeded 50,000.

On a wet and bleak October 13, the lady announced to the children that she was Our Lady of the Rosary. According to the New Catholic Encyclopedia, "the sun appeared and seemed to tremble, rotate violently, and finally fall, dancing over the heads of the throng before it returned to normal."

Each time, only the children saw the apparition, but others said that they saw movement in the tree and the appearance and disappearance of the cloud. Many in the crowd of October 13 said they had witnessed what became known as "the Miracle of the Sun."

During the apparitions, the Virgin asked the children to encourage people to "pray a great deal and make many sacrifices," to "pray the rosary every day to obtain peace for the world." She promised that if her requests were heeded, the result would be "the salvation of many souls, the conversion of Russia, and world peace." Otherwise, she warned, a second great war would erupt and Russia would "spread her errors throughout the world, fomenting wars and persecutions against the church. The good will be martyred, the Holy Father will have much to suffer, various nations will be annihilated . . . but in the end, my Immaculate Heart will triumph. The Holy Father will consecrate Russia to me, it will be converted, and a period of peace will be given to the world."

Despite opposition from Portugal's strong anti-clerical movement, word quickly spread and pilgrims began visiting Fátima in the thousands. Miracle cures were proclaimed. In 1922, a canonical process of enquiry was opened that lasted seven years. In 1930, the bishop of Leiria pronounced the visions worthy of credence and authorized the cult of Our Lady of Fátima; four decades later, the occurrences at Fátima were declared to be "an affirmation of the Gospel" by Pope Paul VI.

Francisco died in 1919 and Jacinta the following year, both of influenza. In 1928 their cousin Lúcia entered the Carmelite convent at Pontevedra in Coimbra, Portugal, where she remains.

Today, the major pilgrimages to Fátima take place on May 13 and October 13, when the roads leading to Fátima are choked with pilgrims, most of them on foot. The months between, particularly around the 13th, are also busy.

The pilgrims converge on Cova da Iria, the site of the apparitions. There, a neoclassical basilica (begun in 1928 and consecrated in 1953), topped by a 213-foot tower surmounted by a bronze crown and a great crystal cross, now stands at one end of a vast paved square. The square has seen up to a million pilgrims at a time; many cross it on their knees.

One tour guide notes that the basilica and its surroundings are "of no architectural interest; Fátima is not for observers. An official notice puts it like this: 'If you come simply as a visitor, respect the pilgrims at prayer. This place has nothing to satisfy mere curiosity. What matters here is the heart.'"

Although it is popular as a pilgrimage destination, Fátima remains relatively isolated. Apart from vendors of religious medals, figurines, and sacred images, the village is predominantly made up of religious houses and hostelries for the accommodation of pilgrims and the infirm. There are many places to stay, but reservations are needed far in advance for the major pilgrimage dates. Restaurants are also plentiful, but the majority of them are in the hotels.

Transport

Fátima is on the Entroncamento–Coimbra-B train route. Passengers from Lisbon (about 70 miles south) change at Entroncamento, from which Fátima is a train ride of only about 15 minutes. Coimbra is about 90 minutes from Fátima by train. There are also frequent buses from Lisbon and between Fátima and nearby towns.

In the Region

Batalha, 11 miles west of Fátima, is home to the former Dominican cloister of Santa Maria da Vitoria. In 1385, at Aljubarrota, King John I of Portugal vanquished the Spaniards who were attempting to incorporate his country into the Castilian kingdom. In fulfillment of a vow to the Virgin in return for the victory, he began the building of Santa Maria da Vitoria as a monument to Portuguese independence. The work, which progressed under successive monarchs, is regarded as an outstanding example of Iberian art.

Alcobaça, about 11 miles from Batalha, offers one of Portugal's most impressive religious monuments, the Monastery of Saint Mary of Alcobaça, also built in fulfillment of a vow made in gratitude for victory in a battle—against the Moors in 1147 for Santerém. Finished in 1178, it is Portugal's largest church.

Coimbra, about 60 miles north of Fátima, was Portugal's first capital. It is essentially a university town and is at its best when school is in session. Students at the University of Coimbra wear traditional black capes and adorn their briefcases with ribbons, whose color denotes which faculty they attend (red for law, yellow for medicine, and so forth). In May, after final exams, they burn their ribbons in a ceremony called Queima das Fitas that amounts to a city-wide party.

Coimbra's highlights include the Sé Velha (Old Cathedral), designed and built in the twelfth century; the Sé Nova (New Cathedral), a seventeenth-century Jesuit church; and the Museu Machado de Castro, originally built to house the prelates of Coimbra, which offers one of Portugal's finest collections of sculpture.

Leira, situated between the rivers Lena and Lis 14 miles northwest of Fátima, is the center of a region known for its handicrafts, particularly fine hand-blown glassware. Its castle, Renaissance cathedral, and former royal palace are among its attractions.

The Four Caves Circuit, eight miles from Fátima, near the village of Mira de Aire, is a series of caverns segmented into many smaller caves, some with lakes. The best known of these is the Lake of Pearls, which has rock formations unique in Europe.

Lisbon is Portugal's capital, largest city, and chief port. There was a major settlement on the site before the Romans arrived in 205 B.C., but the oldest part of the present city dates from the 300-year occupation of the Moors, which began in the eighth century. Historic attractions from every subsequent period abound, although much of the city was destroyed by an earthquake and tidal wave in 1755.

Notable among Lisbon's buildings are Castelo de São Jorge (Saint George's Castle), the Sé (Cathedral), Belém Tower, Jerónimos Monastery, and the Gulbenkian Museum.

SANTIAGO DE COMPOSTELA

Santiago de Compostela in northwestern Spain, where the remains of the Apostle Saint James are said to be enshrined, came to prominence as a pilgrimage destination in the Middle Ages. For centuries it was surpassed in importance only by Jerusalem and Rome.

Making the arduous journey along the Camino de Santiago (Way of Saint James) was believed in medieval times to be an assurance of a place in heaven. Pilgrims obtained a compostellana, a document that not only certified that the holder had completed the pilgrimage but also served as a plenary indulgence, offering remission from purgatory.

The shrine reached its peak as a pilgrimage destination during the twelfth century, when it attracted an estimated two million pilgrims a year from across Europe and from all levels of society. It was during that era that the pilgrimage to Santiago de Compostela became the basis for the first known guide book, part of the Codex Calixtinus, a collection of texts relating to Saint James and his worship.

The numbers of pilgrims have varied over the centuries, but today the shrine is thronged once again, particularly in "jubilee years," when the feast day of Saint James (July 25) falls on a Sunday. In all years, the shrine and the city are at their busiest in July and August.

Legend has it that the Apostle James the Greater traveled from the Holy Land to convert Spain to Christianity and remained there for seven years before returning to Judea, where he fell victim to King Herod in A.D. 44 and was beheaded. His disciples are said to have returned to Spain with his remains. The burial site was lost to memory until the early ninth century, when a star is said to have guided Bishop Theodemir of Iria Flavia to it. The relics found there soon gave rise to a cult, and the site—then called Libredón—became a popular object of pilgrimage.

Legend also holds that in 844 Don Ramiro I was leading Spanish troops in an attack on the occupying Moors near Logroño when a knight in armor, mounted on a charger and bearing a white standard with a red cross, appeared on the battlefield and beat back the infidels. The Spanish recognized the knight as Saint James, gave him the surname Matamoros (Slayer of Moors), and gave the reconquest of Spain a patron saint.

This added greatly to the significance of the remains at Santiago. King Alfonso II of Asturias (792–842) built a church over the tomb, and Alfonso III (866–911) built a larger one. It was razed by the Moors in 997, along with the rest of the city, but—according to Islamic as well as Christian sources—the Moors were afraid to touch the tomb of Saint James.

The remains were secure until 1589, when they were taken from Santiago de Compostela to a place of safety because Sir Francis Drake had attacked the nearby port of La Coruña. Their whereabouts were unknown for nearly 300 years, until they were found in 1879 and returned. In 1884 Pope Leo XIII recognized the legitimacy of the relics and the tomb of Saint James.

Although modern scholars disagree on the authenticity of the legend, exploratory excavations in recent times indicate that some remains at the site date to the first century.

It is still possible to obtain a compostellana, the certificate that identifies one as a true pilgrim to Santiago de Compostela, and several thousand are issued each year. The requirements are stringent: Intending pilgrims must acquire a “pilgrim’s passport,” which is necessary both to obtain the compostellana at the end of the journey and to stay at any of the many pilgrim refuges along the way; in addition, the pilgrim must walk, cycle, or go on horseback for a minimum of 100 kilometers (about 60 miles) of the route.

The Cathedral

The present cathedral, begun in 1075 and consecrated in 1211, is regarded as both an architectural and a religious treasure, and it is unique in all of Spain because it can be seen from plazas on all sides. Like most ancient churches, it has numerous later additions, but most of them blend well with the original. Of particular note is the Obradoiro facade, a Baroque masterpiece that since 1750 has framed the cathedral’s main entrance, raised two stories above the Plaza del Obradoiro. Between twin towers, Saint James—in pilgrim costume—looks down from a lofty height.

Inside the entrance is the twelfth-century Pórtico de la Gloria, the original entrance completed in 1188 by Maestro Mateo, its three arches carved with biblical figures from the Last Judgment and purgatory. In the center, Christ is flanked by his apostles and the 23 Elders of the Apocalypse. Just below Christ is a serene Saint James, poised atop a richly carved column that includes the humble face of Maestro Mateo at the bottom.

The interior of the cathedral is richly ornamented. The high altar is surmounted by a thirteenth-century statue of Saint James, and beneath the altar a crypt has been built into the foundations of the ninth-century church that contained the Saint James’s tomb and now enshrines the relics of the saint and his two disciples, Saint Theodore and Saint Athanasius.

Santiago de Compostela is one of the most impressive and intact of Spain’s old cities, and the plazas and streets surrounding the cathedral offer considerable variety. Among noteworthy buildings are the San Martin Pinario Monastery and its church, the Plaza de España, a spacious square bordered by the cathedral, and numerous other buildings of architectural interest, including the bishop’s palace (Palacio Gelmírez).

There is a wide variety of accommodation in Santiago de Compostela and in the surrounding region, from small guest houses and hostels to Paradors, a government-run chain of luxury hotels. Among the latter is the former Pilgrims’ Hospital near the cathedral and the Hotel de los Reyes Católicos (Catholic Monarchs), both of which were built in the early sixteenth century by Ferdinand and Isabella in gratitude to Saint James for having finally expelled the Moors.

Transport

There is an international airport near Santiago de Compostela, with regular flights to London, Paris, Zurich, Geneva, and Frankfurt, as well as daily service to Madrid and Barcelona. The journey to Santiago de Compostela is about 11 hours by train from Madrid. There is also regular bus service from major cities in Spain and elsewhere in Europe.

In the Region

The camino francés (French route) to Santiago de Compostela within Spain covers a distance of about 250 miles from the Pyrenees through the regions of Navarre, the Rioja, Old Castile, and Galicia. Along it are some of the most outstanding buildings in Spain: churches, monasteries, cathedrals, hostels, and hospitals, all associated with the pilgrimage.

The Asturian route, which runs roughly parallel but farther to the north, near the coast, offers similar scenic attractions. The two routes join at León, which is about 200 miles east of Santiago de Compostela.

León, in the high plains of Old Castile on the Bernesga River, was founded in A.D. 70 as a permanent camp for the Roman legions. The city’s richest era was early in the reconquest, when the capital was moved there from Oviedo, in the far north, in the early tenth century. Sections of the medieval ramparts can still be seen. A wealthy provincial capital today, it offers the variety of modern city life alongside its half-timbered old town. Among the city's architectural features are its impressive Gothic cathedral on the Plaza de Regia, dating from 1205. Along the Bernesga is the Antiguo Monasterio de San Marcos, a former monastery that is now a five-star hotel in the Parador chain.

Astorga, about 276 miles southwest of León, is worth a visit because of its Neo-Gothic Palacio Episcopal (Archbishop's Palace), a fanciful building designed by Antoni Gaudí a century ago. The building contains the Museo del Camino (Museum of the Way), which offers a history of the pilgrimage.

The nearby Galician Coast offers scenic harbors, seaside towns and fishing villages, among them Muros, Padrón, and La Coruña. The latter offers Sobrado de los Monjes, one of Galicia's vast monasteries, built between the Renaissance and Baroque periods. Also on the coast, at the Portuguese border, is Túa, which according to legend was founded by Diomedes, son of the Homeric hero Tydeus. It shows signs of habitation by Greeks followed by Romans and Visigoths.

COLOGNE/AACHEN

The cities of Cologne (Köln) and Aachen in west central Germany share a number of distinctions. Both were early centers of the Christian faith in Europe, both became the repositories of holy relics, and both over the centuries have been important centers of pilgrimage.

And although both cities were devastated by heavy bombing in World War II, their imposing cathedrals—among Europe's most noteworthy—both survived.

Cologne has been a center of influence since Roman times. Settled by the Romans in 38 B.C., it achieved prominence within a century. In 15 A.D. it was the birthplace of Julia Agrippina, who was to become the wife of the Roman Emperor Claudius; in her honor, Claudius made it a Roman capital (called Colonia Claudia Ara Agrippinensis) in 50 A.D.

The city had Christian churches as early as the fourth century, when Emperor Constantine I began the Christianization of the empire. Under the Franks (from about 400 A.D.) it became a royal residence, famous for its many churches. Under Charlemagne (from about 775 A.D.) it was the center from which Saxony was conquered and evangelized. From the eleventh to sixteenth centuries it was the Holy Roman Empire's largest and richest city.

Its importance as a center of pilgrimage grew enormously after its acquisition in 1194 of relics of the Three Magi, the Wise Men who brought gifts to the infant Jesus. For a time, it was a pilgrimage destination second only to Rome.

It was felt that the relics needed a home worthy of their importance, and work began in 1248 on the Kölner Dom, a Gothic cathedral that would rise on a magnificent scale. The relics remain there today, in the same huge reliquary, heavily worked in silver and gold, in which they were originally displayed.

The cathedral—dedicated to Saint Peter and the Blessed Virgin—was built on the site of several previous churches dating to the sixth century. An aim of the design was to accommodate large numbers of pilgrims at one time, and the cathedral's measurements are impressive: 470 feet in length, 147 feet wide at the nave, and with an interior peak of 140 feet, making it larger even than Notre-Dame de Chartres, which had been completed a few decades earlier. At the time they were built, the Kölner Dom's twin west towers, at 515 feet, were by far the tallest man-made structures in the world.

Construction continued off and on until 1880, and the cathedral stands today virtually as it was then—the only one of Cologne's more than 100 churches to have emerged virtually undamaged from nearly three years of bombing.

Aachen

Pilgrims in countless numbers came to Aachen from across central Europe in the Middle Ages largely because of a rich trove of holy relics that have been there since the reign of Charlemagne, the first Holy Roman Emperor.

The story of Aachen, in fact, is inseparable from the story of Charlemagne, his father Pepin the Short, and the empire itself.

The earliest traces of Christianity date to a fifth-century chapel at an ancient bath shrine. King Pepin replaced that chapel with a small palace chapel in the eighth century and Charlemagne a few years later built an eight-sided chapel (modeled on the church of San Vitale in Ravenna, Italy) that now forms the core of Aachen's cathedral, a structure that was built over the course of the next 1,000 years.

The most important of its relics are the swaddling clothes of Christ, the loin cloth of the Lord, the cloth for John the Baptist's head, and the Blessed Virgin's cloak. They have been kept in a Gothic Marian shrine in the cathedral since 1239. Also in the cathedral is a fourteenth-century statue of the Virgin that is venerated as miraculous.

The Domschatzkammer (cathedral treasury) is unusually rich; Charlemagne himself journeyed to Rome to be crowned Holy Roman Emperor in 800, but the next 32 Holy Roman Emperors were crowned at Aachen and each of the coronations brought sumptuous gifts to the cathedral. The cathedral's notable tenth-century altar painting, for instance, was donated by Otto III, and the richly decorated golden shrine that contains Charlemagne's remains by Frederick II.

The cathedral also holds Charlemagne's marble throne, modeled after the throne of Solomon.

In the Region

Cologne and Aachen, less than 45 miles apart, are two of the principal cities of Germany's Rhineland.

Cologne—known for eau de cologne, the toilet water first produced there in the early eighteenth century—is also a center of European and international trade fairs.

A lively and cosmopolitan city, it is as famous for its restaurants, bars, and shops as for its cultural attractions. Among the latter, in addition to the famous cathedral, are the Museum Ludwig and the Wallraf-Richartz-Museum, which together have the Rhineland's most significant art collection. The Wallraf-Richartz-Museum has paintings from the past six centuries; the Ludwig concentrates on the twentieth century, with an emphasis on Picasso. Near the cathedral is the Römisch-Deutsches Museum, built on the ruins of a wealthy Roman businessman's villa.

The city has 12 distinctive Romanesque churches, and while all but the cathedral were heavily damaged during the war, all have been substantially rebuilt. Notable among them is Gross St. Martin, part of which dates to the thirteenth century. It is in the Martinsviertel, the reconstructed old city that is now a center of Cologne night life.

Aachen, near Germany's border with Belgium and Luxembourg, is also known by its French name, Aix-la-Chapelle. It still has the hot springs that drew the Romans and Pepin the Short. Their waters are said to be capable of curing an assortment of ailments; over the ages, some have preferred to drink them, others to bathe in them.

Aachen's Rathaus (Town Hall), near the cathedral, features a Gothic hall first used in the fourteenth century for the coronation banquet of Emperor Karl IV. The town also has several museums; one specializes in German, Flemish, and Dutch art and early woodcarvings, another in Rococo and Biedermeier furnishings, and a third (the Internationales Zeitungsmuseum) offers a vast and international collection of newspapers.

Bonn, about 15 miles south of Cologne, the capital of West Germany until reunification in 1990, is well known as a government and intellectual center and also had its beginnings before the Christian era, as a Roman outpost known as Castra Bonnensia. Its medieval cathedral is said to be built upon the spot where two Roman soldiers, Cassius and Florentius, were martyred in 251 for their Christian beliefs.

Ludwig van Beethoven was born in Bonn; his birthplace is now a museum dedicated to his memory.

A third city within easy reach of Cologne and also on the Rhine is Düsseldorf, an economic capital of post-war West Germany famous for its classy shops and cafes, particularly along the broad double boulevard called the Königsallee. Among Düsseldorf's noteworthy churches is St. Lambertus, a Gothic thirteenth-century house of worship now designated a basilica minor.

Transport and Accommodation

The region is served by International Airport Köln/Bonn and Düsseldorf International Airport. Numerous train and bus services connect with other points in Germany and Europe. Travel on the Rhine itself is popular with many visitors.

These are "world-class" cities, offering accommodation and restaurants of all types and in all price ranges.

CANTERBURY

The city of Canterbury in southeastern England has long been venerated as a holy place. It was the spot at which Christianity took root in England, but its huge popularity as a shrine came six centuries later at the time of Thomas Becket—archbishop, martyr, and saint.

The pilgrims of Chaucer's fourteenth-century Canterbury Tales were making a journey that was by then enormously popular throughout the British Isles and Europe. Other English shrines—among them Walsingham, Winchester, and Glastonbury—also drew worshippers, but not in the same vast number.

Canterbury's religious importance dates back to the year 597, when Pope Gregory I sent Augustine (later to be Saint Augustine of Canterbury) from Rome with a group of monks to evangelize the Anglo-Saxons. When Augustine landed at Ebbsfleet in 597, the king, Ethelbert of Kent, gave him permission to preach, as well as a house and an old church in Canterbury. Although Augustine died only seven years after his arrival, the apostolate soon spread.

Thus, Canterbury had become of prime importance as the seat of the Roman Catholic Church in England by the time Thomas Becket was appointed its archbishop in 1162 by the young King Henry II. The two were bound by a strong mutual affection, and in 1154 Henry had made Becket lord chancellor. Becket resisted appointment as archbishop, but he was required to accept; the king wanted an agent and ally in his growing campaign to have a submissive church and thus more complete control of his kingdom.

Within a few years, Becket and Henry were seriously at odds, with Becket refusing to cooperate with the king's insistence upon supremacy. The differences between the two deepened, and Becket was forced into exile. He and the king reached sufficient agreement for Becket to return to Canterbury in 1170, but he was to die for his beliefs before the end of the year.

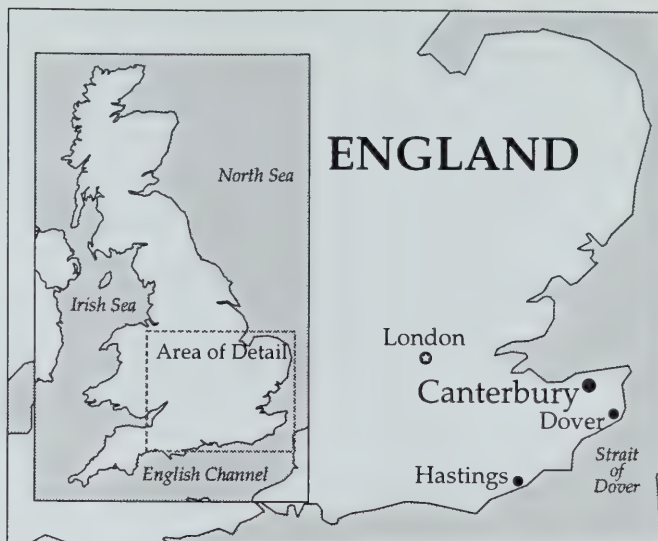

In late December, the exasperated king spoke the words that led to Becket's death: "Will no one rid me of this low-born cleric?" The comment was heard by four knights loyal to Henry and opposed to the archbishop. The four went to Canterbury and forced their way into the cathedral, where Becket was waiting for them. He was slain on the spot.

Becket's martyrdom was quickly followed by reports of miraculous cures through his intervention, and within a little more than two years he was canonized.

The murder of Becket caused such outrage that Henry had to give up his attempts to subjugate the church, and soon after Becket's canonization the king was forced to do penance for the murder, in the form of a flogging at the slain archbishop's coffin.

Not long afterward, the cathedral was destroyed by fire and a new and considerably grander one built to house the Shrine of Saint Thomas, financed by a growing pilgrimage trade.

Veneration grew steadily for three centuries, until King Henry VIII's quarrels with the Vatican led to formation of the Church of England with him at its head. He plundered and destroyed the shrine and secretly disposed of the relics of Saint Thomas, denouncing him as a traitor.

Today, the place in the cathedral that the shrine had occupied is marked by a single candle and an inscribed stone. Pope John Paul II and Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie knelt there together in prayer in May 1982.

Transport

Canterbury is an easy trip of about two hours from London by road or rail. For international travelers, Gatwick Airport is considerably closer to the region than London's Heathrow and is also well served by rail and bus service.

In the Region

The city of Canterbury, in the Kent countryside on the River Stour, offers abundant historic treasures. The Romans originally landed in the area and stayed in England for four centuries; the Saxons followed and ruled until they were defeated by William the Conqueror at a battle near Hastings in 1066.

The cathedral, the first of England's great Norman cathedrals, was built during the twelfth through fourteenth centuries in the English Late Gothic style and is dominated on the exterior by the central tower, Bell Harry. The crypt is the largest and one of the finest in England. Next to the cathedral are two monastery buildings dating from the twelfth century. A series of thirteenth-century stained-glass windows illustrate Becket's miracles.

Several other churches are notable, among them the eleventh-century Saint Dunstan's (restored in the nineteenth century); Saint George's, where the writer Christopher Marlowe was baptized in 1564; Saint Martin's, a small church thought to be the oldest Christian church in England; and Saint Mildred's and Saint Peter's, both built in the thirteenth century.

At nearby Barfreston (five miles southeast) is the church of Saint Nicholas, a Norman village church with noteworthy twelfth-century carvings.

Chilham, between Canterbury and Wye, offers medieval jousting displays on summer holidays.

Canterbury is a good starting point from which to explore the English Channel coast, and nearby coastal towns of note include Sandwich, Margate, Broadstairs, Ramsgate, and Deal.

Hastings is another coastal town not far away, but the scene of the famous Battle of Hastings is a place some miles from it, called Battle. Its attractions include what remains of Battle Abbey, founded by the victorious William the Conqueror and positioned astride the actual field of combat. The abbey's gatehouse stands in the marketplace of the town that grew up around it.

WALSINGHAM

The shrine of Walsingham in the small town of Little Walsingham in Norfolk was once England's second most frequented place of pilgrimage. At its peak during the Middle Ages, it drew the faithful from all corners of the British Isles and from the Continent. Only Canterbury was more popular.

The Reformation led to destruction of Walsingham's religious buildings and virtually erased the town from the ecclesiastical map in the 1500s, but a rekindling of interest in the shrine in recent times is attracting pilgrims in ever-increasing numbers.

The event that led to Walsingham becoming a major shrine occurred about 1100 when Richelde de Fervaques, the wife of a local magnate, dreamed that she had been transported to the house in Nazareth where the Virgin Mary received the Annunciation of Christ's birth. She was told to build a replica of the Holy House in Walsingham, and she did so. But soon afterward, according to the legend, the wooden structure was moved about 200 feet by mysterious forces.

Word spread, and pilgrims began to arrive. In 1153, an Augustinian priory was established at the site by Richelde de Fervaques's son, Geoffrey, and the shrine steadily increased in popularity. King Henry III (1216-1272) frequently made the pilgrimage, as did his son Edward I (1272-1307), who had a great veneration for a statue of the Blessed Virgin there. They were the first of a succession of monarchs to show devotion to the shrine, and this royal interest redoubled Walsingham's fame and its fortunes.

In the fourteenth century, the shrine's church and priory were rebuilt and the Franciscans established a friary nearby. By some accounts, Walsingham actually surpassed Canterbury as a place of pilgrimage in the early sixteenth century.

Then came Henry VIII—who had made the pilgrimage to Walsingham himself, with his wife Catherine of Aragon—and the Reformation. Five years after Henry's separation of the English church from Rome, the shrine was despoiled of its wealth. Because of their roles in a conspiracy against Henry, Prior George Gysburghe and Sub-Prior Nicholas Mileham were executed. The statue of the Virgin was taken to London, where it was burned.

Today, only remnants of the priory and its church survive. The most impressive section of the ruins is the church's large east window, dating from the fourteenth century. Some remains of the refectory wall are all that survives of the priory.

Efforts to revive the pilgrimage began about a century ago, and two churches were established for this purpose. An Anglican church was built in 1931 and enlarged in 1938, while about two miles away Catholics installed and consecrated the Slipper Chapel in a fourteenth-century building (it takes its name from the pilgrims' ancient custom of removing their footwear a mile or so before reaching the shrine).

Transport

Walsingham is, and has always been, a small town. The Dutch scholar Erasmus visited the shrine in 1511 and wrote that it was "a town maintained by scarcely anything else but the number of its visitors." To a large extent, this is still true.

The town, near the North Sea coast, is a three- to four-hour drive from London. The nearest city, Norwich, is about two and a half hours from London by rail.

The region, however, offers ample accommodation ranging from hotels in major towns to bed-and-breakfast establishments in all price ranges.

In the Region

Norfolk and the bordering counties of Suffolk and Cambridgeshire are rich in historical importance and offer numerous sites of religious and secular interest. Few regions of England have a similar wealth of impressive churches and half-timbered buildings.

Norwich, founded by the Saxons, is known for its cathedral and its castle. The cathedral was begun in 1096 by Herbert de Losinga, who had come from Normandy in 1091 to be its first bishop and is entombed there. The cathedral is enclosed by high walls, and only its lofty spire is visible from a distance. The city also has more than 30 well-preserved churches dating from before the Reformation. The castle, like the cathedral, was begun by the Normans not long after the Conquest. It now houses a museum.

Bury St. Edmunds owes its name to the martyrdom of Edmund, the last king of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of East Anglia. Edmund was murdered by the pagan Danes in 896 and was canonized. His shrine attracted numerous pilgrims, and eventually a town grew around it. In the eleventh century a Norman abbey marked the town's considerable status as a religious center; its ruins are now the site of the Abbey Botanical Gardens. Two of the original churches inside the abbey walls survive, both dating from the fifteenth century.

Cambridge, best known for its university dating from the early thirteenth century, blends medieval with later Tudor, Jacobean, and Georgian buildings. The university dominates the town and offers its major attractions for visitors, among them King's College Chapel—Perpendicular Gothic in style and regarded as one of the most beautiful buildings in England. The town, a crossing point on the River Cam, has been inhabited since prehistoric times.

Ely, about 15 miles north of Cambridge, is dominated by its cathedral, which can be seen for miles. Begun by the Normans in 1081, it was built on the site of a Benedictine monastery that dated to the sixth century and is considered a prime example of medieval architecture.

GLASTONBURY

Few places are as steeped in legend as the town of Glastonbury in England's West Country. A renowned place of pilgrimage, it once had England's largest and wealthiest monastery—now one of Europe's most famous ruins.

Glastonbury's origins are obscure, and the myths surrounding it are numerous and tangled. By some accounts, it was the first Christian settlement in England, founded by Joseph of Arimathea in the first century. It is said that Joseph brought to Glastonbury the Holy Grail—the chalice used by Christ at the Last Supper—and that it remains hidden there.

King Arthur and his queen, Guinevere, are said to be buried in the town, along with Saint Patrick the Younger and Saint Brigid of Ireland.

What is known with certainty is that Celtic monks were at Glastonbury from at least the fifth century and that Benedictine rule was instituted there in the eighth century. Saint Dunstan was made abbot in 940, and Glastonbury became the center of the great monastic revival; from there, missionaries spread Benedictine life throughout England and Scandinavia.

By the time of the Conquest (1066), Glastonbury had become a seat of considerable wealth and influence; as a measure of its importance, three Saxon kings had been buried there.

In 1184 the monastery complex was destroyed by fire, but this event spurred its heyday as a place of pilgrimage. Monks at Glastonbury spread the word that they had found the tombs of Joseph of Arimathea and King Arthur, and the resulting deluge of pilgrims brought enough wealth to enable construction of England's largest monastery of the time, completed in 1303. Glastonbury Abbey became known for its emphasis on intellectual development, its huge library, and its promotion of scientific farming.

The monastery thrived until the Reformation of the sixteenth century. Its last abbot, Richard Whiting, acquiesced to the gradual assumption of control of the English church by Henry VIII, but he made the error of holding back some of the abbey's material wealth. In 1539, Henry dissolved and plundered the abbey and executed the elderly Whiting, whose head was impaled on a spike on the abbey gate and his body quartered and sent to Bath, Wells, Ilchester, and Bridgwater as an example to others.

Transport

England's West Country (the counties of Somerset, Devon, and Cornwall) is an easy drive of about three hours from London, and its major towns are reachable by regular rail and bus service.

Accommodations are relatively plentiful, from hotels of various classes in urbanized areas to country inns and bed-and-breakfast establishments.

In the Region

Glastonbury is among England's most popular attractions for tourists and pilgrims of every type.

The buildings of Glastonbury Abbey quickly fell into ruin after the mid-sixteenth century, and much of the stone was hauled away and used for construction of countless other buildings in the vicinity. What remains of the abbey are parts of several walls, arches, portals, and pillars. Portions of the Chapel of the Virgin remain, but the only virtually undamaged building of the complex is the fourteenth-century abbot's kitchen, which is among the best-preserved medieval kitchens in Europe.

The town is built around Glastonbury Tor, a grassy hill more than 500 feet high and topped by a single stone tower, all that remains of the Church of Saint Michael. The hill offers panoramic views of the town and the surrounding countryside; Arthurian legend holds that the king and his Knights of the Round Table are buried somewhere within it and that the chalice is hidden in a deep well at its foot.

Also in Glastonbury is the Lake Village Museum, in a fifteenth-century house, which has remains of an Iron Age settlement on the site. There is also the Somerset Rural Life Museum, housed in a fourteenth-century tithe barn built to store the one-tenth of the town's total harvest that was owed to the church.

Wells, England's smallest cathedral city, is only about five miles from Glastonbury. Wells's medieval character is largely intact. Its twelfth-century Cathedral Church of Saint Andrew, considered a masterpiece of Gothic architecture, rises behind the high walls of the moated Bishop's Palace, the earliest parts of which date to about 1235.

The towns of Somerset have some of England's most impressive church buildings, notable among which are the parish church of Saint Cuthbert in Wells and the church of Saint Mary Magdalene in Taunton.

The region is a good starting point for an exploration of the West Country, which offers some of Britain's most noteworthy scenery and buildings.

KNOCK

Until the night of August 21, 1879, the town of Knock in County Mayo, Ireland, was a quiet backwater of no consequence to the outside world. That night, 14 people saw an apparition of the Blessed Virgin, Saint Joseph, and Saint John on an outer wall of the parish church, and the town was changed forever.

As the 14 beheld the vision they were drenched by a heavy rain, but the immediate area where the apparition appeared remained dry. The Virgin, they said, was dressed in a white cloak and wore a golden crown.

The witnesses were devout Christians, and the apparition became a matter of deep belief locally and, over the next few years, throughout the region. The local archbishop, John McHale, convened a commission of enquiry; it found that the apparition had been genuine.

The small parish church soon became a place of pilgrimage, initially from neighboring towns and villages, then from across Ireland and beyond.

It was largely through the work some decades later of a parish priest, John Horan, that Knock became known internationally. His efforts have led to a level of pilgrimage that has transformed the town into "the Lourdes of Ireland." A huge basilica, dedicated to Our Lady of Knock, opened in 1976 and holds 20,000 worshippers. Its construction involved contributions of every kind from every county of Ireland, including 32 pillars representing the counties in the basilica's circular ambulatory. The wall of the old church that was the site of the apparition has been enclosed in glass and is the object of constant veneration.

There are many reported visions of the Blessed Virgin—more than 200 since the early nineteenth century—and church authorities are careful about approving devotion at the places where they occur. Knock is one of fewer than a dozen to have received canonical sanction since 1842.

As is the case at several other well-frequented Marian shrines, there also has been considerable commercial development. The once-quiet village now has scores of parking lots, souvenir shops, chapels, and other businesses and religious facilities that cater to the more than 750,000 pilgrims who visit Knock each year.

Soon after the basilica rose, a major airport with runways capable of handling jumbo jets was built not far from the town in a controversial project strongly backed by the same Father Horan. The facility opened in 1986, inaugurated with the outward-bound flights of two planeloads of pilgrims to Rome.

In the Region

Ireland is a favored tourist destination, and Knock is just one of its many attractions of religious significance. County Mayo alone has numerous holy places.

Among them are Cong, on Lough Corrib, which has an ancient abbey, founded in the seventh century and favored by a succession of Irish kings. While much of the abbey was rebuilt in the twelfth century, portions of the original structure remain. Ashford Castle in Cong is now a luxury hotel.

Ballintubber is the site of Ballintubber Abbey, founded in the early thirteenth century by Cathal O'Connor (Cathal of the Wine Red Hand), king of Connacht, and known as "The Abbey that Refused to Die." Mass has been said there continuously for nearly eight centuries, although the abbey was suppressed in the early days of the Reformation and attacked and burned by Cromwellian soldiers in 1653.

Some 20 miles from Ballintubber is Croagh Patrick, the mountain where Saint Patrick is said to have spent 40 days and nights in prayer and fasting in the year 441. Many pilgrims climb the mountain, some with bare feet, to reach a chapel at its summit and the broad vista of Clew Bay more than 2,500 feet below. The mountain is known to have drawn religious pilgrims even before the Christian era, particularly on the day of Crom Dubh, an ancient Celtic mythic figure.

The islands of Clare, Caher, and Achill are just off the coast west of Croagh Patrick. Caher, now uninhabited, features early monastic settlements; a small, roofless church is surrounded by a dozen stone crosses each at least a thousand years old. On Clare are the Holy Well at Toberfelabride and a fifteenth-century abbey. Achill, the largest and most frequented of the islands, is connected to the mainland by bridge; the others are reachable by boat.

The Connemara region lies not far from Knock in the western part of County Galway and is a scenic mountain area dotted with ancient monuments, tombs, and castles favored by Irish as well as international tourists.

Pilgrims are drawn to other sites associated with Saint Patrick, Ireland's patron saint, and there are many of them—including quite a few that scholars believe have no real connection with him. There is much speculation about details of Saint Patrick's life, including the precise years of his birth and death (generally thought to be 389 and 461), and much written about him is based on legend.

For example, question surrounds Station Island in Lough Derg, known as Saint Patrick's Purgatory. Thousands of pilgrims make their way there each summer, between Whitsunday and the Feast of the Assumption. They stay for three days, doing without sleep and without food (apart from plain tea and toast) and walking barefoot over stony ground to pray at a series of small shrines. But while the island has been attracting such devout pilgrims for at least 700 years, church scholars say the place probably has no direct connection with the saint.

Similarly, Saint Patrick is said to be buried in the churchyard of an eighteenth-century cathedral in Downpatrick, Northern Ireland. While the cathedral is believed to be on the site of a monastery Patrick built, and in fact is on the site of a number of earlier churches, many hold that it is more likely his resting place is in another Northern Ireland city, Armagh. More can be learned about these and other matters at Downpatrick's Saint Patrick Heritage Museum, near the cathedral.

International visitors will usually include the capital, Dublin, in any trip to the Irish Republic. Dublin's history goes back more than 15 centuries, and its fortunes have varied widely. It was occupied by the Vikings in the ninth century, taken by the Anglo-Normans in the twelfth, developed as a major trading center during the Middle Ages, was sacked by Oliver Cromwell in the seventeenth century, recovered and grew in size and importance in the eighteenth, declined sharply in the first half of the nineteenth, then saw a new period of expansion in the Victorian era. Today it is a major center of the arts and commerce.

Among Dublin's many sites of religious interest are the Carmelite Church, which contains the remains of Saint Valentine, patron saint of lovers—a gift from Pope Gregory XVI in the early nineteenth century; the Church of Saint Francis Xavier, built in 1829, the year of Catholic Emancipation; the Church of the Holy Trinity on the grounds of Dublin Castle; and the imposing Pro-Cathedral, built in the early nineteenth century and used for important state funerals.

Traveling between Dublin and Knock, many pilgrims make a stop at Clonmacnoise in County Offaly, the site of a monastic settlement founded about 548 by Saint Ciaran that is among Ireland's most noted holy places. A major pilgrimage is held on September 12, the Feast of Saint Ciaran. Clonmacnoise's cathedral dates from the early tenth century. Another common stop on the route is Maynooth, home to Saint Patrick's College, the training center for Ireland's Catholic diocese.

Transport

Regular flights from major U.S. airports connect with Dublin, and within Ireland there are connections by air from Dublin to Knock. Bus and rail services are also plentiful, as are organized tours.

Accommodation throughout Ireland is available at all levels, from luxury hotels to village inns and farm bed-and-breakfast establishments. Most towns offer a variety of eating places. In major centers, restaurants and pubs are plentiful and offer a wide range of cuisines and prices.

MEDJUGORJE

The small Bosnian village of Medjugorje, southwest of Sarajevo, was virtually unknown to the outside world until 1981. On June 24 of that year, a Sunday, six teenagers reported that they had encountered the Blessed Virgin on a hillside near the village. They said they had seen a beautiful woman with dark hair and blue eyes who seemed to be about 25 years old. She was dressed in gray and white, with a white veil; her feet were in a froth of clouds, and an arc of stars appeared above her head.

The teenagers—four girls and two boys—asked who she was, and she replied (in Serbo-Croatian), “I am the Blessed Virgin Mary.”

The apparitions continued. Members of the group, sometimes individually and sometimes together, continued to meet with the Virgin, going into trances for as long as 40 minutes. After each apparition, they would repeat the message they had received to an ever growing crowd. Repeatedly, the Virgin asked them to claim and exercise the power of prayer.

The civil war in the former Yugoslavia has slowed but by no means stopped the flow of pilgrims. At times, the fighting has come perilously close to Medjugorje. The night sky has often been lit by rocket fire, but the faithful continue to arrive; at least 15 million have come from around the world to worship there.

Although the Vatican has not recognized the authenticity of the visions, Medjugorje has been transformed into a center of pilgrimage and tourism.

The six then-teenagers—Vicka, Ivan, Jakov, Ivanka, Marija, and Mirjana—continue to have visions of the Virgin. Two of the women, now married with children, have less frequent visitations; the others have essentially devoted themselves to a life as intermediaries, relaying the Virgin’s “locutions.”

Visitations now take place, on a regular schedule and virtually every evening, in the Apparition Room of the parish rectory near the new village Church of Saint

James. The Virgin’s message is received by one or more of the visionaries and passed on—translated into several languages—to the attending crowds.

The basic message is consistent: The Virgin stresses that God is present in the world and that prayer and repentance are needed to bring peace—to Bosnia and the world.

Transport

In the years leading up to the civil war, Medjugorje resembled a boom town, with constant building activity to accommodate the expanding pilgrimage traffic. Although activity has slowed, Medjugorje remains a well-frequented destination; companies specializing in religious pilgrimages often offer it as an option in a package with Rome, which is a relatively short flight across the Adriatic.

Although major cities in the former Yugoslavia are served by regular commercial flights and are well connected by rail, the advisability of independent travel will depend upon the state of hostilities between the warring factions at any given time.

In the Region

The twin-towered Church of Saint James, built since the apparitions began, is the focus of the village of Medjugorje. Nearby are scores of shops selling souvenir religious articles of all descriptions. Also abundant are tour company offices, fast-food restaurants, and accommodations at various levels.

Pilgrims can often visit with one or more of the six visionaries. The place of the original apparitions, Podbrdo (Hill of the Apparitions), is near the village, and many also trek up Krizevac (Hill of the Cross) near the church, on a “path of peace” that passes 14 crosses symbolizing the Stations of the Cross; the trip up and back can take more than three hours.

Tours usually reach Medjugorje via Split, on the Adriatic, a city that has drawn travelers since ancient times. The Roman emperor Diocletian was born in nearby Salona in the mid-third century, and his seaside palace at Split is among the region's most noteworthy sights. After Diocletian's death in 313, the palace became a residence for exiled Roman emperors and their families. The vast walled complex, covering more than seven acres, forms the city's core.

Nearby is the Venetian piazza, dating from the years of rule by Venice (1420–1797).

Conditions permitting, there are frequent boat tours of the Adriatic coastal towns (among them Hvar and Brac) from Split, as well as numerous bus tours to outlying areas of scenic or historical importance.

GUADALUPE

The image of Our Lady of Guadalupe is one of the most famous in Latin America and the world, and the sanctuary in Mexico City in which it is enshrined draws an ever increasing number of pilgrims.

According to tradition, on December 9, 1531, the Blessed Virgin appeared to an Indian named Juan Diego at Tepeyac, a hill where the Aztecs worshipped the mother of their gods. The Virgin instructed Juan Diego to have the bishop, Fray Zumárraga, build a church on the site. The priests were skeptical, but three days later the Virgin appeared to Juan Diego again. This time, she told him to pick flowers and take them to the bishop. He did so, wrapping the flowers in his cloak. When he opened the cloak before the bishop, it bore the Virgin's image.

Several early accounts of the event exist, the oldest of them left by Juan González, a young canon who was an interpreter at the meeting of Juan Diego and Bishop Zumárraga (Juan Diego knew no Spanish, and the bishop didn't speak the Indian language).

By the late sixteenth century, the tradition and the image had spread to various parts of the world. Its renown grew, and in 1737 the Most Holy Mary of Guadalupe was chosen as the patroness of Mexico City. Other important cities of Mexico followed suit, and in 1746 the patronage spread to all of New Spain, which stretched at that time from central California to El Salvador and Guatemala. In 1754 Pope Benedict XIV granted a Mass and Office proper to the celebration of the feast on December 12. In 1910 Pope Pius X declared the Virgin Patroness of Latin America, and in 1935 Pope Pius XI extended the patronage to the Philippines. Official coronation of the image took place in 1895, with pontifical authority.

At least a dozen popes have expressed veneration for the holy image and its tradition. Pius XII, on the fiftieth anniversary of the coronation in 1945, stated that the Virgin of Guadalupe was the "Queen of Mexico and Empress of the Americas" and that the image had been painted "by brushes that were not of this world."

Each year on December 12, millions of pilgrims now converge on the site of Juan Diego's vision, many crawling on their knees for the last few hundred yards, seeking cures and other favors.

The first sanctuary was built there not long after the apparitions took place. In 1556, Alonzo de Montúfar, the second archbishop of Mexico and a promoter of devotion to Our Lady of Guadalupe, began erection of a second church. In 1695, the cornerstone of a third sanctuary was laid on the site, and this church was dedicated in 1709. With additions made in the late nineteenth century and again in the 1930s, it stands today as the Basilica Vieja (Old Basilica).

The number of pilgrims grew in modern times to the extent that the Basilica Vieja was no longer large enough to accommodate them, so in 1976 the Mexican government built the Basilica Nueva (New Basilica), a modern structure of controversial design that can hold 10,000 worshippers. Juan Diego's cloak is enshrined there in its own altar, and is viewed from a moving sidewalk. The Basilica Vieja now houses a museum of votive offerings and religious art from the fifteenth to the eighteenth century.

In the Region

La Villa de Guadalupe, the site of the two basilicas of the Virgin of Guadalupe, is also the place from which the Spaniards besieged the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlán, about a decade before the apparitions. A plaque near the basilicas marking the fusion of Aztec and Spanish cultures reads, in translation: "On August 13, 1521, Tlatelolco—heroically defended by Cuauhtémoc—fell to the power of Hernán Cortés. There was neither triumph nor defeat in this. It was the painful birth of the present, mixed race of Mexico."

Close on the heels of the conquering Spanish forces came the priests and monks, who—largely with enslaved Indian labor—built hundreds of churches and convents, about 50 of which remain.

Mexico City has its share of problems—pollution, poverty, and crime among them—but it is also a cosmopolitan city of about 20 million people (including tens of thousands of expatriates) and is the cultural center of Mexico. There are restaurants of virtually every type and every price and a similar abundance of accommodations.

In central Mexico City, on the Zócalo (the largest paved square in the Western Hemisphere), is the Catedral Metropolitana (Metropolitan Cathedral), the oldest and largest cathedral in Latin America, begun in 1573 and built over the next three centuries. It is noticeably lopsided when viewed from across the square, having sunk into the spongy subsoil over the decades, but a project to stabilize it was completed in recent years. The building is a combination of Neoclassical and Baroque architecture, with five altars and 15 chapels. Nearby is the small Sagrario Church (similarly tilted), dating from the 1700s.

Also on the Zócalo is the Palacio Nacional (National Palace). The original structure was built by Cortés on the site of the home of Montezuma II, the last Aztec emperor, and the present building dates from 1693, with later additions and modifications. It is now the seat of national government, and it is open to visitors.

A block north of the Palacio Nacional are the ruins of the Templo Mayor (Great Temple of the Aztecs), unearthed accidentally during construction work in 1978 and now a frequented archaeological site and museum.

La Iglesia de San Francisco, on the site of Mexico's first convent (1524), is an eighteenth-century French Gothic structure.

Museums abound in Mexico City, from those marking ancient sites and cultures to the more modern, among them the Museo de Leon Trotsky, where the Russian revolutionary lived and was assassinated in 1940 and where his ashes remain.

Mexico City also has the Plaza México (the world's largest bullring), the floating gardens of Xochimilco, and the pyramids at San Juan Teotihuacán.

Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city, sits on the high plain of the Sierra Madre about 150 miles inland from the Pacific. It was the center of a silver-mining region, and, by the late sixteenth century, wealth poured in. Much of the wealth went to the creation of churches, monuments, and palatial homes. Its sixteenth-century cathedral is a focal point for visitors. Guadalajara is readily accessible from Mexico City.

In southeastern Mexico, the Yucatán peninsula is increasingly popular with tourists, both those seeking beach resorts and those interested in ancient ruins. There are regular connections from Mexico City by rail and air.

The Yucatán is internationally famed for the remains of the pre-Columbian cities of the Maya. There are hundreds of sites, only a few of which have been excavated. The best known is Chichén Itzá, once a large city, which includes huge pyramids and a Mayan astronomical observatory. Uxmal is smaller and has simpler but more elegant buildings. Less well-known ruins (less frequented by tourists) are found at Kabah, Sayil, Dzibilchaltún, and Cobá.

The other face of the Yucatán is its luxury resorts. Chief among them is Cancún, now Mexico's leading tourist attraction. Cancún didn't exist until 1974; it was created on a small barrier island, the site chosen by a computer fed with such variables as "beaches" and "distance from the United States." Cancún now has more than 20,000 hotel rooms and draws more than a million visitors a year.

SAINTE-ANNE-DE-BEAUPRÉ

Miracles and favors attributed to Saint Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin, draw more than a million pilgrims a year to Quebec's Basilica of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré.

Devotion to Saint Anne was brought to the New World by the earliest French colonists. The majority of them came from eastern France, where the ancient devotion had lately been revived at the shrines of Sainte-Anne du Carrefour and Sainte-Anne d'Auray.

The Canadian shrine, on the Saint Lawrence River about 20 miles east of Quebec City, originated in 1658 when Etienne de Lessard of the Beaupré coast donated a piece of land at Petit Cap for a chapel. A wooden chapel was built within the year and dedicated to Saint Anne, but it was an event four years later that established the site as a pilgrimage destination. When three boatmen were caught in raging seas off nearby Cape Tourmente, they prayed to Saint Anne for deliverance; they were safely tossed ashore near the chapel and were quick to attribute their salvation to her intervention. Word quickly spread, and pilgrims began arriving with their prayers and petitions.

The small chapel was built so close to the often turbulent waters of the Saint Lawrence that it was damaged by waves and tides and within a few years was replaced by a stone church a little farther inland. As pilgrimage grew steadily, successive churches were built at the site. By 1876, the original small chapel had given way to a basilica. When it was destroyed by fire in 1922, the present neo-Roman basilica took its place.

Today the shrine is one of the largest and most celebrated in North America.

Every 20 years a new accounting of miracles and favors attributed to Saint Anne—Quebec's patron saint—is published by the Redemptorist fathers, who have been in charge of the shrine since 1878. Just inside the basilica's main entrance, under its towering twin spires, there are high piles of canes and crutches—attesting, according to countless notes of thanks left with them, to the saint's healing powers.

The small town of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré is dominated by the basilica, designed by architects Maxime Rosin of Paris and Louis-N. Audet of Quebec. Built in the shape of a Latin cross, it has 22 chapels and 18 altars. Ceiling mosaics illustrate details from Saint Anne's life, while 214 stained-glass windows by French artists Auguste Labouret and Pierre Chaudière feature personages believed to have been instruments of God over the centuries.

Near the basilica is the Chapel of the Holy Stairs, which has a replica of the stairs Christ climbed as he went before Pontius Pilate. Pope John Paul II climbed the stairs on a visit to the shrine in 1984. Also nearby is the Commemorative Chapel built in 1878 on the foundations of an earlier church and including many of its remnants, such as a crucifix sculpted by François-Noël Levasseur in 1775.

In the Region

Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré is at the western end of the picturesque region of Charlevoix, which extends along the north bank of the Saint Lawrence to its confluence with the Saguenay River and takes its name from Jesuit priest François-Xavier de Charlevoix, Quebec's first historian.

The region combines mountain, pastoral, and coastal scenery, and offers resorts, picturesque villages, and numerous establishments catering to the tourist trade. Among its better known locations are the towns of Baie-Saint-Paul (dating to 1628), Pointe-au-Pic, La Balbaie, Cap-a-l'Aigle, Saint-Joseph-de-la-Rive, and Baie-Sainte-Catherine.

West of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré is Quebec City, one of the oldest and most picturesque cities in North America. The first European to set foot on the spot, in 1535, was explorer Jacques Cartier. Samuel de Champlain founded the settlement in 1608, and in the years that followed the growing city played a major role in events shaping the New World.

The church was a primary force from the earliest years as religious orders (among them the Jesuits, the Franciscan fathers, and several orders of nuns) founded churches, hospitals, and schools. The city's church of Notre Dame de la Victoire is the oldest standing cathedral on the North American continent, dating from 1678. In fact, much of today's city dates from the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

Near Quebec City, in the direction of Sainte-Anne-de-Beaupré, is Ile d'Orléans, an island in the Saint Lawrence that has retained the atmosphere of an earlier time. The rural, largely agricultural island (measuring about 21 by 9 miles) offers churches and homes that are among the oldest in the province.

Transport and Accommodation

Quebec City has a major airport and the region as a whole is well served by bus and train services and well-maintained highways. Accommodation of every type is plentiful, as are restaurants of every class.

AURIESVILLE

The seventeenth-century martyrdom of eight missionaries in the North American wilderness is commemorated at the Shrine of Our Lady of Martyrs in Auriesville, N.Y.

Jesuit missionaries had come from France to the New World in the 1600s in hope of converting the native people to Christianity. Their work was centered principally among the Huron Indians in southeastern "New France," the present-day Canadian provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

The year 1642 found the Jesuits' missionary center, Mission Sainte Marie, badly in need of supplies. This required a difficult journey to Quebec, about 600 miles away, its dangers compounded by the fact that the Iroquois, including the Mohawk tribe, were constantly at war with the Huron and deeply distrustful of the few Europeans they had seen.

An expedition headed by Father Isaac Jogues arrived in Quebec in mid-July after a trek of several weeks. On their return trip up the Saint Lawrence in early August, in canoes laden with supplies, the convoy of about 40 was set upon by a war party about 70 Mohawk.

Many in the convoy were killed outright. Father Jogues and his young mission assistant, Brother René Goupil, survived the attack but were beaten and tortured during the next two weeks as the war party headed home with them as captives. There was worse to come.

Once in Mohawk country, in what is now Upstate New York, they were taken from village to village and tortured continually. Then, on September 29, Brother Goupil was slain after being accused of practicing black magic—he had been seen making the Sign of the Cross over a small child. Father Jogues was spared, but remained captive for more than a year. Finally escaping with the help of Dutch settlers at Fort Orange (now Albany), he made his way to New Amsterdam (now New York) and crossed the Atlantic to France, where he received a hero's welcome. Before long, however, his mission in the New World called him back and he set sail for North America again.

In early May of 1646 he was once more among the Mohawk, leading a peace mission for the French and the Huron. Initial approaches went well, but soon afterward he and a donné (lay assistant), John Lalande, were taken prisoner—blamed for pestilence and crop failure that had plagued the Mohawk since their previous visit. Although the Mohawk were divided on their fate, both men were put to death. Father Jogues was tomahawked and beheaded, his body thrown into the nearby river and his head impaled on a spike of the high palisade fence surrounding the village. The next day, Lalande was also slain and beheaded.

By December 1649, five of their fellow missionaries had met similar fates at their Canadian outposts—priests Antoine Daniel, Jean de Brébeuf, Gabriel Lalemant, Charles Garnier, and Noël Chabanel.

The church confers the title "martyr" only after rigorous inquiry proves that hatred of the faith motivated those who killed them. These eight, known as the North American Martyrs, were beatified in 1925 and canonized in 1930. Brother Goupil, the first to die, thus became the first canonized martyr of North America.

The Shrine

The Mohawk abandoned the village where Father Jogues and Lalande were slain not long after the martyrdoms and its precise location was unknown until its rediscovery in 1884 following long research that included examination of detailed letters written by Father Jogues after his escape in 1643.

The site, known by the Mohawk as Ossernenon and now Auriesville, immediately became a shrine. The first pilgrimage took place in 1885, when about 4,000 faithful climbed a rough hillside to kneel outside a small chapel. Today the shrine covers 600 acres and is visited by more than 300,000 pilgrims each year between May and October. Always among them is a group from Caughnawaga in Saint Lawrence County, Canada—descendants of the Mohawk who inhabited Ossernenon three centuries ago.

One of the shrine's outstanding features is the Coliseum, a circular church that can accommodate 6,500 worshippers. The shrine's most precious treasure is a reliquary containing fragments of the bones of Saints John de Brébeuf, Gabriel Lalemant, and Charles Garnier—the only three of the eight martyrs whose remains were partially recovered.

In the Region

A few miles from Auriesville, near the town of Fonda, is the National Tekakwitha Shrine. This shrine honors Kateri Tekakwitha, who was born at Ossernenon in 1656, the daughter of an Algonquin mother who had converted to Christianity and a Mohawk sachem of the Turtle clan. She first met Christian missionaries at the age of 11 and was baptized at 20, on Easter Sunday 1676. Her beliefs were met with hostility by many of her people, however, and she relocated to a Christian Indian settlement near Montreal. She died there less than three years later, but in that short time Kateri had become known for her piety, her love of those around her, and her patience in times of suffering. She was declared a Servant of God by Pope Pius XII in 1943, and declared Blessed by Pope John Paul II in 1980.

The North American Martyrs are also honored at a Martyrs Shrine Church conducted by Jesuits near the site of the village of Sainte Marie where the missionaries worked from 1639 to 1649. The village itself, near Midland, Ontario, has been reconstructed.

Auriesville is in the region known as Leatherstocking Country, which offers some of New York State's most scenic pastoral countryside. The Mohawk Valley itself was the scene of considerable action in the Revolutionary War and numerous sites commemorate its battles; noteworthy among them is Rome's Fort Stanwix National Monument, a faithful reconstruction of a fort successfully held by the Continental Army during a long siege by British forces in 1777.

Also in Leatherstocking Country is Cooperstown, home of the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Doubleday Field, where baseball was born in 1839. Nearby is Lake Otsego, immortalized by James Fenimore Cooper as "Glimmerglass."

To the immediate north of Auriesville is Adirondack Park, an area covering six million acres, much of it designated "forever wild" by the state. Also nearby, to the south, are New York's Catskill Mountains.

Transport

Auriesville is roughly midway between New York City and Montreal and lies just off the New York Thruway between interchanges 27 and 28. There is regular train and bus service to towns within a few miles of the shrine.

CHIMAYÓ

For nearly two centuries pilgrims have traveled to a small town in northern New Mexico to worship and to ask divine help at the Santuário de Chimayó. Today, an estimated 300,000 make the journey each year—some 50,000 during Holy Week alone—and the shrine is becoming known as "the Lourdes of America."

As at Lourdes, many come seeking cures. The adobe chapel encloses a site whose soil is said to have miraculous healing powers. According to Father Miguel Mateo, pastor of Chimayó's Holy Family Church, "Many people say they have been healed by God at the Santuário." Discarded crutches, braces, and canes, as well as scores of notes and letters of thanksgiving, line the Santuário's walls.

According to legend, a man who lived in the village in the early years of the nineteenth century saw a mysterious light shining from the ground on the night of Good Friday. He and others from the village dug at the spot and unearthed a large wooden crucifix. They took it to their church three times, but each time it disappeared—only to be found soon afterward at the spot from which they had taken it. They concluded that the site was sacred and built a small oratory or chapel to enclose it; the oratory is now part of the larger Santuário.

The chapel and its santos (religious images) are featured in Willa Cather's 1927 novel Death Comes for the Archbishop.

The shrine, which has been designated a National Historic Landmark, is particularly revered by Hispanic Catholics. Its annual feast is celebrated on the last Sunday in July.

The Santuário is dedicated to Our Lord of Esquipulas, a devotion originating from Esquipulas, Guatemala, where a statute of the Crucifixion has attracted pilgrims from across Central America since the late sixteenth century.

In the Region

Chimayó and its immediate area are also well known for weaving, wood carving, and outstanding regional cuisine. The nearby village of Cordova is the center of a wood-carving industry that for generations has produced santos and other decorative figures for churches and private devotions. Cordova's Saint Anthony of Padua Chapel is noted for its locally crafted statuary and other woodwork.

The region features gently hilly countryside dotted with orchards and small farms, set against a backdrop of the rugged Sangre de Cristo Mountains. It is within easy reach of New Mexico's capital, Santa Fe, and of Taos, both popular tourist destinations.

Taos is in fact three places: the town of Taos itself, Taos Pueblo, and Ranchos de Taos.

The town of Taos, which blends Native American, early Spanish, and Anglo cultures, is known around the world as a literary and art center. Among its famous devotees were writer D. H. Lawrence, painter Georgia O'Keeffe, and photographer Ansel Adams. (The D. H. Lawrence Shrine near Taos contains Lawrence's ashes; the La Fonda de Taos Hotel has some of his paintings.) Numerous galleries and museums house the work of Taos artists past and present and celebrate such figures as the legendary frontier scout Kit Carson, who lived there for more than 25 years.

A popular day trip from Taos is the Enchanted Circle, a 90-mile drive through the peaks, canyons, and forests of the Carson National Forest.

Taos Pueblo, two miles north of the center of town, is the location of the multi-story pueblo dwelling known as San Geronimo (Saint Jerome) de Taos that has housed a community of Taos-Tiwa Indians for nearly 1,000 years. It is among the oldest continuously occupied dwellings in North America.

Ranchos de Taos, four miles south of town, is a ranching and farming community founded by the Spanish centuries ago. It is the site of one of the Southwest's most noteworthy churches, the Church of San Francisco de Asis (Saint Francis of Assisi), an outstanding example of Early Mission architecture. Built in the seventeenth century and recently restored, it is known for its rich collection of religious artifacts and paintings. In the nearby parish hall, visitors can see the painting "Shadow of the Cross"; in the evening the shadow of a cross, not seen during daylight hours, appears over Christ's shoulder.

Among the region's outstanding museums is the Millicent Rogers Museum, which contains more than 5,000 pieces of Hispanic and Native American art.

Santa Fe, the second-oldest city in the United States (after Saint Augustine, Florida), was founded in 1609 by Don Pedro de Peralta as La Villa Real de la Santa Fe de San Francisco de Asis (the Royal City of the Holy Faith of Saint Francis of Assisi) and has retained much of the pueblo appearance of its colonial times. A notable exception is the Cathedral of Saint Francis, built in the late 1860s in the French Romanesque style for Santa Fe's first archbishop, Jean Baptiste Lamy. The archbishop is entombed beneath the church's high altar. An adjoining adobe chapel holds La Conquistadora (Our Lady of the Conquest), the oldest representation of the Virgin in the United States.

Built in the same era, by the same French architects and Italian stonemasons, was Santa Fe's Loretto Chapel. Legend surrounds a "Miraculous Staircase" leading to its choir loft. The 20-foot wooden staircase, a double helix with no visible central support, is said to have been built by an unknown old man who offered to help when the workmen had difficulty designing a stairway to the loft. He built it single-handedly, using only a square and a saw; many believe he was Saint Joseph.

Another Santa Fe church, the Church of Cristo Rey, was built in recent times (1939) but of traditional mud-and-straw brick, and is the largest adobe structure in the United States.

NATIONAL SHRINE OF THE IMMACULATE CONCEPTION, WASHINGTON, D.C.

More than 35 million people from across the United States and around the world have visited the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C., since its dedication in 1959.

The shrine is the largest Catholic church in the United States and the seventh-largest church in the world, with a seating capacity of 3,500 and a total capacity of 6,000.

The project began in 1914, when Bishop Thomas Shahan, fourth rector of the Catholic University of America in Washington, received the approval for the undertaking from Pope Pius X.

An early proposal for a Gothic design was rejected in favor of a more contemporary structure embodying elements of the Byzantine and Romanesque styles. The principal creator of the final design was Charles Maginnis; following his death in 1955, an associate, Eugene F. Kennedy, Jr., was architect for the erection of the superstructure.

The cornerstone was laid on September 23, 1920, and at the shrine's dedication nearly 40 years later the interior of the massive structure was still incomplete. Officiating at the dedication—the largest ecclesiastical ceremony in the history of the Church in America—was Cardinal Francis Spellman of New York, in the presence of four other cardinals and more than 200 archbishops and bishops.

In the form of a Latin cross, the building is 459 feet long, 240 wide at the transepts, 120 feet high to the peak of the roof, 237 feet to the top of the dome, and 329 feet to the top of the bell tower. It was built entirely of masonry, as were the great medieval cathedrals of Europe.

Artistic details were planned by an iconography committee made up of theologians, artists, and historians. The east wall is on the theme of faith; the west wall on charity. The north features contemplatives, and the facade centers on Christ and the Blessed Virgin.

In the interior, a 3,500-square-foot mosaic of Christ in Majesty by John de Rosen decorates the north apse.

The shrine has a full schedule of daily and Sunday masses, confessions, and regular services, and provides guides and services for pilgrims and other visitors.

The Catholic Church in the United States

The organizational structure of the Catholic Church in the United States consists of 33 Provinces with as many Archdioceses (Metropolitan Sees); 148 Suffragan Sees (Dioceses); The Military Archdiocese; four Eastern-Rite jurisdictions immediately subject to the Holy See in Rome. The Eparchies of St. Maron (Maronites), Newton (Melkites), St. Thomas the Apostle of Detroit (Chaldeans) and St. George Martyr of Canton, Ohio (Romanians). Each of these jurisdictions is under the direction of an Archbishop and Bishop called an Ordinary, who has apostolic responsibility and authority for the pastoral service of the people in his care.

The structure includes the territorial episcopal conference known as the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. In and through this body, which is strictly ecclesiastical and has defined juridical authority, the Bishops exercise their collegiate pastorate over the Church in the entire country.

Related to the NCCB is the United States Catholic Conference, a civil corporation and operational secretariat through which the Bishops, in cooperation with other members of the Church, act on a wider-than-ecclesiastical scale for the good of the Church and society in the United States.

The following is a list of the thirteen regions in the United States and provinces within those regions.

PHILOSOPHY

There is no magic way to raise money but there are time tested procedures which will make the process more effective and the results more satisfying.

Experience is a key factor; knowing what to do and when to do it. Time is a key factor: undivided attention with a definite beginning and end. Communications is a key factor: simple, declarative sentences in attractive and frequent brochures and bulletins.

Development Direction can do all this for you. Our resident consultants provide full time, on-the-scene service, for a flat, predetermined fee. Or, executives of the firm will furnish service on a part time basis.

If you need money, but are reluctant to bring in professional people, call us. If you can do it yourself, we will tell you how. We do not discourage such initiative, but the professional fee is so reasonable, it more than pays for itself.

You will be pleasantly surprised. Call or write us.

Kirby-Smith Associates, Inc.

Ministry of Church Finance

Since our founding in 1938, we have served more than 5000 Christian churches and schools, while conducting over 2500 fund raising campaigns. Kirby-Smith Associates knows how to combine the vision of your church or school, the commitment of your people, and the empowering work of the Holy Spirit when conducting your campaign. We can tailor a program to meet the specific needs of your church or school. Our program includes detailed on-site counseling, term consultation and follow-up visits.

In a typical Kirby-Smith assisted campaign:

- ... Each family is visited personally using volunteers or Kirby-Smith visitors. The visits focus not only on obtaining a financial faith commitment, but also on other stewardship issues such as future contributions of time and talent, sacrificial giving, and general pastoral issues.
- ... A greater level of sustained giving and appreciation of the true meaning of all facets of stewardship are developed.
- ... You will experience a greater sense of Christian community which will positively affect all aspects of future service to the Lord.

Our professional methods are spiritually based and the product of training, expert knowledge, and many years of experience. Serving the Christian community is our only mission. We have conducted over 700,000 home visitations since 1938 and we have raised over $100 million dollars in just the last five years for churches and schools like yours.

Please call our 800 number for additional information or to schedule a meeting during which we can present our services to your church or school.

He's outnumbered

THE ARMY NEEDS PRIESTS.

The Catholic soldiers and families in the Army community share the same problems as civilians. Only more so. Most are young, have high pressure jobs, and many are away from home for the first time. But the ratio of parishioners to priests is more than twice as high in the Army as it is in the civilian world. So, if we're going to provide proper spiritual guidance and support, the Army Chaplain Corps needs reinforcements. For more information, call: 1-800-452-7617.

3 organs 2 consoles 1 builder

*T*he officials of the Cathedral of Our Lady of Lourdes in Spokane, Washington realized their organ requirements were unusual. In addition to their two existing pipe organs and carillon, they desired a third organ for even greater musical versatility. Two identical consoles were specified, one at either end of the sanctuary.

*E*ach console was to be equipped with MIDI and capable of controlling all three organs. After an exhaustive search, Cathedral officials found the Allen Organ Company uniquely suited to meet their extraordinary demands.

No matter how unusual your musical needs, Allen can fulfill them, too.

Inspired by an act of God.

On January 17, 1994, an earthquake shook Los Angeles, leaving physical and emotional scars upon the entire metropolitan area. In Sherman Oaks, the St. Francis de Sales church suffered a crushing blow when its magnificent organ was ruined beyond repair.

The Rodgers Instrument Corporation was entrusted with the monumental task of building a new organ for the church. By combining the best of the surviving pipes with new pipes and digital ranks, we created a custom 4-manual instrument boasting 111 speaking stops.

With the installation and tonal finishing completed, this magnificent organ stands as a testament to the dedication and experience of all who helped create it. To find out what kind of musical inspiration we can provide to your church, fortunately an act of God isn't necessary. Simply call us at 503/648-4181.
